Opposition Rises As Debate Begins; Revisions Certain, Backers Concede

May Act Tuesday

The House yesterday opened debate on the Administration's controversial military service extension bill, amid growing opposition to the Senate-approved plan for holding selectees in the Army an additional 18 months.

An 18-month extension of service for National Guardsmen and Reserves appeared acceptable to the House, but most legislators expected the extension of draftees' service to be trimmed to 12 or 6 months.

Revisions Conceded

Republican leaders confidently predicted defeat of the 18-month extension for selectees. Democratic spokesmen called it "a horse race," but privately conceded that the bill was likely to undergo broad revision.

One bloc of Republicans who may hold the balance of power had not decided yesterday, however, whether they would accept any modification of the bill which would improve its chance of final passage. This group may oppose all efforts to reduce the extension to 12 or 6 months and then join those who are fighting any extension of service in voting against the bill.

Also uncertain yesterday was the attitude of a group of 20 to 30 Democrats who normally support Administration foreign and defense policy but are known to regard an 18-month extension for draftees with misgiving.

Nearly 50 Representatives took the floor to express their views on the bill yesterday, with the House operating under a rule limiting general debate to six hours.

May Act Tuesday

Consideration of amendments will begin early in the session Monday and final action on the bill is expected Tuesday or Wednesday. Differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill are then likely to require several days of conference.

The bill, as approved by the Senate, would add 18 months to the maximum service period of every man now in the Army. Selectees,

Tanker Explodes With 15,000-Barrel Cargo of Gasoline

Detroit, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Transiter, 180-foot all-steel tanker of the Transit Tankers & Terminals, Ltd., Montreal, with 15,000 barrels of gasoline aboard, exploded and burst into flames tonight on River Rouge.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation opened an inquiry to determine if sabotage caused the explosion. Two persons apparently lost their lives and that 15 others jumped overboard and were rescued. Eight of them were injured.

Walter Senecal, tender of a highway bridge the tanker cleared shortly before it burst into flames, said: "There was a rumble and a terrific blast. Then flames shot from the ship and I saw some members of the crew jump overboard."

The fire boat John Kendall, spraying water on the drifting Transiter, halted her in midstream as she neared a Wabash Railway bridge.

The Luck of the Navy

Job Brings British Officer, His Children Together Here

AFTER A YEAR'S SEPARATION, Lieut. Surgeon Robert Leaver, of the Royal Navy, and his children, Gillian, 6, and Christopher, 3½, are reunited

A lieutenant surgeon of the British Navy came in from the seas here yesterday, winner in a long sentimental gamble with the fates of war—and into the arms of his refugee children, Chris and Gill, whom he hadn't seen for 12 months to the day.

Leaving the Union Station at 8:30 p. m., the officer, Robert Leaver, a London physician until the war broke out, was whirled in a car with his children, Gillian 6, Christopher, 3½, past the Capitol and through the impressive streets he never had seen before.

But he scarcely took a look.

A year ago, he had told the children goodby in London, knowing they soon were coming to America to spend the war's duration at The Clover Croft School, three miles from Warrenton, along with other refugee children as the guest of Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Washington Post, and Mrs. Meyer.

He had an opportunity of following his profession in the British land services then, but he purposely went with the Navy, in the long-

Girl Menaced At Lincoln Memorial

Her Screams Thwart Attack by Leering Rest Room Intruder

Screams of a 19-year-old Washington stenographer frightened away a man who menaced her in the women's room of the Lincoln Memorial at 8:30 p. m. last night, precipitating a manhunt in which eight Negroes were apprehended.

All were released when the girl, a comely blonde, failed to identify any of them as the intruder.

The incident occurred as Metropolitan Police pressed an investigation of Wednesday's criminal assault upon a 15-year-old girl in Rock Creek Park, seizing two more suspects.

Visiting the Memorial with her escort, Malcolm Murray, of the Capitol Police, the stenographer was combing her hair when a dark-skinned Negro of about 21 entered the washroom. Leering, he advanced toward her as if to seize her, she told police.

Scream Foils Attacker

She retreated to a booth and locked herself inside. When the man refused to heed her request to go way, she screamed. This attracted the attention of Murray and a soldier who was also waiting at the entrance of the Memorial, Private Francis Ferguson, of Fort Eustis, Va.

They dashed to the rest room, then searched the building to no avail. Nearly a dozen cars full of Park and Metropolitan Police searched the vicinity for more than an hour. They were joined by guards of the nearby gas plant. The War Building Roads May Cost D. C. Millions

Capital Faces Outlay For New Approaches On Its Shore of River

District taxpayers are faced with making a multimillion dollar contribution in the form of highway construction if the War Department's "dream" building is erected in Arlington County, but all new roads leading to the 35-million-dollar structure in Virginia may be charged against the Federal Treasury.

This, it was learned last night, is the plan contemplated for division of costs of constructing roadways adequate for carrying thousands of workers to a "super" office building across the Potomac River.

Disclosure of the plan was made as the Senate Deficiency Appropriations subcommittee closed hearings on the project amid reports that the battle in the building controversy appeared to be going in favor of the War Department.

During an executive session of the subcommittee described by one of its participants as "quite a scrap," the statement was made, it was understood, that although the 320 million defense highway bill was killed by Presidential veto, a new measure is forthcoming and Federal funds can be expected for construction of "access" roads to the building in Virginia.

While District officials had hoped to receive some Federal aid on this side of the river, the present plan, it was said, calls for payment from District funds for construction of bridge approaches adequate to carry

5-Gallon-a-Week Limit on Gas Predicted for Eastern Drivers

The average passenger car driver may be limited this winter to five gallons of gasoline a week, statistical experts of the oil industry said yesterday.

A spokesman for one of the larger petroleum concerns in New York, according to the Associated Press, said the previously suggested limit of 15 gallons a week "wouldn't do any good" in preventing the motor fuel shortage threatening the Atlantic seaboard.

"The average consumption in this section of the country," said the spokesman, "was 15 gallons per car each week last year. There isn't going to be that much gas around this winter."

Here, meanwhile, Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown issued special instructions that motorists displaying the new "save gas" windshield and rear window' stickers should not be molested by officers.

Reports of arrests for infractions of the District's "no sticker" rules brought a telephone call to Maj. Beverly C. Snow, chairman of the District Petroleum Conservation Committee, from the office of Petroleum Coordinator Ickes demanding to know why "patriotic citizens" were being apprehended for using the stickers.

Maj. Brown then issued the non-arrest order after conferences with Maj. Snow and representatives of Ickes' office.

Sixteen filling stations of Cities Service have installed devices to measure gasoline wastage and are offering the service free.

The oil industry, according to reports from the Associated Press, is convinced that petroleum products will be delivered to the East from the Southwest this winter on a priority basis—with gasoline for pri-

Morgenthau Asks Wider Taxing Base

Tells Senators All Must Share Burden; Puts Year's Needs At $5,400,000,000

(Chart showing taxes on incomes below $3,000, Page 4.)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Broadening of the income tax base to include millions of new taxpayers, joint returns by husbands and wives and steeper taxation of excess profits were recommended to the Senate Finance Committee yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

Morgenthau asked Congress raise "at least" $3,500,000,000 in new revenue, recommended taxes to produce four billion dollars, and said it would take $5,400,000,000 if the Government is to pay two-thirds of defense operating costs.

As a result, the Senate committee launched a hunt for new revenue that may carry the program above original goals.

It was an "all-out" tax program for an "all out" defense which the Treasury chief, accompanied by his Undersecretary John L. Sullivan, asked Congress to enact. Emergency requirements had changed since his earlier more modest proposals and he called the $3,236,700,000 House bill "inadequate."

Urges All Share Burdens

The time has come, Morgenthau and his aide told the Senate committee, to "make all the people equal partners in sharing the cost of the defense of our country."

To do this, he recommended:

A "substantial" lowering of personal income tax exemptions. (He specified no level but the President mentioned $750 for single persons and $1,500 for married.

Simplification of tax returns for persons making less than $3,000, so they could if they chose, find the amount of their tax on a "synchronized" table instead of computing it themselves.

Revival of the House-defeated joint return provision with modifications proposed by the President, requiring husband and wife to file a single return but granting relief where both work outside the home. Estimated yield—258 million dollars.

Revision of the House-approved "optional" method of computing excess profits taxes. Would base tax instead on invested capital to reach corporations with consistently high earnings, which Sullivan said are left "free of excess profits tax."

Abolition of tax exemptions on new issues of State and local governmental securities.

Stiffening of estate and gift taxes to "reach more estates and provide more revenue."

Reduction in depletion allowances now given oil and similar companies in figuring their income taxes.

Under questioning, Morgenthau estimated these changes would raise from 800 million dollars to one bil-

Two Russian Armies Destroyed In Ukrainian Trap, Nazis Say; Vichy May Yield African Ports

France Will Allow Germans 'Transport Privileges,' Sources In Capital Indicate

By Ralph E. Heinzen
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Vichy, Aug. 8.—Germany may be given "port facilities and transport privileges" in certain parts of the French overseas empire, it was indicated tonight after the arrival in Vichy from Algiers of Gen. Maxime Weygand for "most important" talks with the Petain government.

By the time Marshal Petain's council of ministers convenes tomorrow evening a final arrangement extending the scope of France's troubled "collaboration" with Germany is expected to be ready as a result of closely guarded consultations under way tonight.

The council of ministers must make "momentous decisions" tomorrow involving widespread repercussions and the course of France's relations with both Germany and the United States. The Petain government is trying to fulfill Germany's collaboration demands and at the same time retain its ties with the United States and other parts of the world.

Weygand Flies From Africa

[The statement that vital decisions must be taken by Vichy Saturday appeared to lend some credence to recent reports that a German ultimatum has been served on the Petain government, expiring Sunday and demanding surrender to the Nazis of bases in Dakar, Casablanca and Algiers.]

Weygand flew here by special plane from his African defense post simultaneous with the return to Vichy of Vice Premier Admiral Jean Francois Darlan from Paris, where he conferred with German authorities in the midst of mounting Nazi demands for closer French-German military as well as political ties.

Darlan remained overnight in Paris in order to talk with Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's personal envoy, who returned to Paris only yesterday from Berlin, where he presumably received fresh instructions from Hitler.

Weygand reached Vichy in the midst of a tense situation which has brought Vichy's relations with both Germany and the United States to a crucial point.

Use of Ports Mentioned

Weygand's sudden airplane flight from Africa and his talks with Petain and Darlan are clearly connected with the Petain government's recent note to Washington and the United States' clear threat of a diplomatic break if strategic bases such as Dakar are surrendered to Germany.

So far as could be learned to-

Needed: 5 Million Fur Coats

Timetable Askew, Nazis Set Russian Conquest Back Month

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 8.—Information reaching Bern from foreign military quarters in Berlin indicated tonight that the German high command was forced to revamp its Russian campaign to a long-term basis July 15 when it became evident that blitzkrieg plans would fail.

This information was that Germany originally had expected to occupy the Ukraine and take Leningrad within three weeks, then seize Moscow and reach Astrakhan, on the Caspian Sea, 1,700 miles east of Berlin, by the end of August.

The new time-table calls for capture of Leningrad and Moscow and an advance to the Caucasus by the end of September, the military sources said. If the Russian army were still in existence the Germans would pursue it toward the Ural Mountains and then settle down on a defensive line. (In middle Russia cold weather sets in in mid-September.)

According to the reported plan, the defensive line would extend from Lake Ladoga to the Volga River east of Leningrad and Moscow, continuing on the west bank of the Volga to Astrakhan. The Rumanian and Hungarian armies would be expected to help the Germans hold the line.

The information gave this picture of the strategy from that point on:

In October Turkey would be asked for free passage of German troops for a campaign against British forces in the Middle East.

Japan would attack Russia in the Lake Baikal region of eastern Siberia if the United States intervened actively on the Soviet side.

During the winter the Luftwaffe would concentrate on destructon of Russian industrial centers between Moscow and the Urals. A stock of 5,000,000 fur coats to clothe German troops during the winter already is being collected. Two months before the outbreak of the Russian war the German army had 2,000,000 fur coats which were obtained in Afghanistan, Turkey and Iran. Sweden, Norway and Germany are now being combed to supply another 3,000,000.

By the Associated Press

The destruction of two Russian armies of the Ukraine—the sixth and twelfth—and part of another, the eighteenth, was claimed late last night by the German high command in a special communique.

Taken captive, it was added, were 103,000 men. Russian casualties were declared to number more than 200,000. A total of 25 Red divisions were reported smashed.

These spectacular successes were claimed in what has now become the supreme Nazi offensive effort toward the Black Sea port of Odessa—a thrust which Berlin asserted yesterday had reached an area 125 miles south of Kiev and about an equal distance from the Black Sea.

In this one area, the Germans said officially, the commander of the Sixth Soviet Army, "other high troop leaders" and 30,000 Red soldiers were captured in the annihilation of the big Russian assault force encircled below the town of Uman—which is 75 miles south of Bal Tserkov, where heavy fighting previously had been reported.

Russians Bomb Berlin

Exactly where the bulk of the Russians declared destroyed had been operating was not stated by the Nazis.

Late last night, after hours of silence on the point, Moscow announced that Red warplanes loosed high explosives and fire bombs on the Berlin area Thursday night, thus taking the credit for a raid which British sources all during yesterday had attributed to the Soviet.

Beforehand the identity of the attackers had been in dispute, the Germans insisting that they were British.

In its communiques for yesterday and again early this morning, the Soviet command made no mention of Uman nor of action anywhere in that area.

Both Soviet bulletins mentioned fighting only in the familiar areas, thus implying that there had been no substantial change in the Red lines.

This morning the theaters of action were given as along the Estonian front; about Kakisalmi, which is 75 miles above Leningrad on the Karelian Isthmus; Smolensk at the Russian center before Moscow; Gorosten and Bel Tserkov, the one 80 miles northwest of Kiev and the other 50 miles south of that Ukrainian capital.

Encirclement A Myth, Hull Tells Japanese

Sequel to Conquest

Secretary of State Hull yesterday bluntly accused Japan of trumping up a charge of encirclement by the anti-Axis nations to provide herself with an excuse for conquest.

While he withheld official announcement of how far the United States would go in providing arms for Thailand in cooperation with Great Britain, Hull declared at a press conference that if the Japanese believe themselves to be encircled they have no one to blame but themselves.

He made the comments in answer to charges by Japanese spokesmen that Japan is being encircled economically, politically, militarily "and even alphabetically" by the United States, Great Britain, the Netherlands East Indies and China.

Summons Nomura

Hull summoned to the State Department the Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, perhaps to lay before him personally this country's views about Japan's conduct. Nomura left, however, without making a statement to reporters.

Hull said at his press conference that he assumes that a country like Japan, if it is law abiding, is in no

States 'Peace Aims' At Luxembourgers' Reception for Consul

Adolf A. Berle, Jr., Assistant Secretary of State, revealed last night that the United States plans to devote its full strength after the war to the relief and reconstruction of the battle-scarred world.

"It is the plan of this Government," he said, revealing another momentous segment of America's postwar plans, "when the tide of barbarity shall be rolled back, to turn the full measure of its economic strength to bringing help, relief and sustenance to the tens of millions of families in many countries who are now hungry, cold, homeless, sick, separated or in prison by the ruthless act of a group of tyrants."

Berle spoke at a reception at the Luxembourg Legation given in honor of George Platt Waller, American consul in Luxembourg for the last ten years.

To Resume 1918 Role

He made plain that the United States is prepared to resume on a much vaster scale, the role it played in relief of war sufferers after November, 1918.

Berle also implied that the Government plans to turn the vast war industry, which it is now creating, into channels of world reconstruction when peace is reestablished.

The Assistant Secretary of State, a leading New Dealer and White House intimate, also set forth these other sequels to a victory over Hitlerism:

1. Downtrodden countries must be reestablished on national lines.
2. There must be a "general ac-

Defense Linking Radio Stations In Super-Network

Nation-wide plans to use all broadcasting stations for air raid warnings and other official messages in event of a "military emergency," were outlined yesterday by the Defense Communications Board through James Lawrence Fly, chairman.

"Current reports by the DCB," Fly said in a statement, "indicate that of approximately 880 standard broadcast stations in operation, nearly 500 are already connected to the potential supernetwork carried on telephone lines."

The plan would make available almost instantly every radio station for national announcements, or all of the stations in any one or more regions for regional ones. The stations would remain in private hands and the program would be carried out on a cooperative basis, except for possible combat areas.

Roosevelt Works on Papers; Stern Note to Japan Forecast

A dispatch from the Presidential cruise yacht Potomac reported yesterday that President Roosevelt was spending most of the day working on official papers.

The dispatch said:

"Cruise uneventful and weather continues fair. President spent most of day working on official papers. Potomac and Calypso moved close inshore today and received fuel, water and provisions."

Speculation regarding a possible meeting at sea between the President and Prime Minister Churchill continued with rumors that Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, and Maj. Gen. James H. Burns, adviser to Harry L. Hopkins, lend-lease administrator, who are out of the Capital, may be participating in any conferences under way. There was still no explanation of the absence from Washington of the chiefs of the Army, the Army Air Force, and of Naval operations.

London, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Current British-American discussions are expected to produce the sternest warning which a group of great powers ever has addressed to Japan, it was understood tonight.

How much of the warning will be made public and how much of it will remain "implicit in coming events" remains to be seen.

The warning, it was understood, may include a statement to Japan that Britain and the United States are prepared to extend still farther their "practical aid" to Russia; that the anti-Axis powers will further strengthen their military organizations in the Western Pacific; that the United States, Britain and Australia consider the integrity of the Netherlands East Indies essential to their own security, and that London and Washington will "not be indifferent" in event Japan attacks Russia.

Over Our Shoulder

LIFE IN THE ARMY

There are 16 Army posts in the Washington area. The District itself has Bolling Field. In Maryland are the Ordnance Department's Aberdeen Proving Ground, Chemical Warfare's Edgewood Arsenal, the Quartermasters' Holabird Depot, and, of course, Fort Meade. Nearby Virginia includes the Remount Depot at Front Royal, and Arlington Cantonment, Fort Myer and Fort Belvoir, right across the river. Farther down, near Petersburg, is Camp Lee, a replacement center, and over on the coast are Fort Eustis, Camp Pendleton, Langley Field, and Forts Monroe and Story.

Each of these posts is the scene of tremendous expansion and tremendous activity. Aberdeen, for example, used to hold only a few hundred persons. Now it has 12,000 officers and men, and you can imagine the work it has taken to expand the post to accommodate these new men and their work.

Sunday's rotogravure brings you, in eight full pages, the picture story of life in each of these posts. You'll see men being taught ordnance work at Aberdeen, engineering at Belvoir, flying at Langley and Bolling Fields, gunnery at Story, Monroe, Pendleton, and Eustis, other activities at the other camps. Uncle Sam has put the women to work, too—there's a page of pictures of girls making gas masks at Edgewood Arsenal.

Here is a vital subject handled pictorially to make you feel as if you yourself had taken the tour of these camps with The Post's reporter and photographers. Don't miss the eight-page picture story of life in the Army!

Smashed 2 Armies, Nazis Say; Reds Claim Lines Are Holding

Ukrainian Trap Closed, Reich Avers; 103,000 Captured

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 8.—The Nazi high command in a special report tonight declared that the jaws of a giant trap have destroyed the Russian Sixth and Twelfth armies and part of the Eighteenth on the Ukrainian front, with 103,000 Soviet soldiers taken prisoner.

Russian casualties were put at more than 200,000.

The prisoners, the announcement said, included the commanders of both the Sixth and Twelfth armies. It was stated that 317 tanks and 858 guns and 5,250 motor trucks were captured.

Earlier the high command's regular communique had reported the capture of the commander of the Soviet Sixth Army along with "other high troop leaders" and more than 30,000 prisoners and much booty.

Assault Force Annihilated

[All these figures apparently were reported as in addition to Russian losses announced Wednesday for the Ukrainian front since the start of the war. They were put then at 150,000 prisoners taken and 1,970 tanks, 2,190 artillery pieces and 980 planes captured or destroyed.]

All told, the high command said, 25 Red army divisions were wiped out.

Besides vast quantities of their equipment, it asserted entire trainloads of war stuffs fell into German hands.

The Russians were declared by the high command to have suffered the "heaviest of bloody losses" in the titanic struggle raging over the Ukraine, roughly in a triangle between the Dniester and Dnieper Rivers and the Black Sea.

Nazis Swing South

According to the Germans, Southern armies under the general command of Field Marshal Gen. Karl Rudolf von Rundstedt set the stage for the Soviet debacle as early as July 12, when the Nazis announced they had broken through the Stalin line beyond Zhitomer and penetrated close to Kiev.

The Germans then were said to have swung southward and cut off the Red Army's communications to the rear. Gradually the encirclement ring was pictured as having been drawn tighter with the aid of Nazi and Rumanian units pushing northeastward from the Dniester River. On August 6 the high command said this encirclement battle was in full swing.

The Russians were taken, according to the high command, in the annihilation of a Russian assault force encircled southeast of Uman. This town is about 50 miles south of Bel Tserkov, where bitter fighting has been reported recently, and about 125 miles south of Kiev.

Unofficial German reports have said that Kiev was surrounded and also that German troops were hammering at the gates of the Estonian capital of Tallinn, at the northern end of the front below Leningrad.

The high command communique did not mention Kiev, and thus the Uman action indicated that the Germans are now directing a main southern offensive southward toward the Black Sea Coast to cut off the important port of Odessa, which is some 140 miles from Uman.

Railway Reported Cut

[London advices tended to confirm this, and said the Germans already had cut the Smolensk-Odessa Railway.]

On the Estonian front the high command reported capturing Rakvere (Wesenberg), 60 miles east of Tallinn on the railway to Leningrad, and said that the German forces then pushed 15 miles beyond to the Gulf of Finland.

This presumably would cut off Russian forces in the Tallinn area from any means of land escape without smashing their way through the German lines.

Unofficial German sources said that the Germans were fighting within 25 miles of Tallinn. Previous high command reports had reported the capture of other towns in this Estonian sector, including Tapa, important rail junction 50 miles east of Tallinn.

Thus according to Berlin claims the northwestern corner of Estonia still held by the Russians is bounded on the west and north by Tidewater and on the east and south by hostile German forces, and is without rail connection to the Russian hinterland.

Vichy Expected To Give Nazis Ports

night there is no question of handing over any French Empire bases to the Axis but port facilities and transport privileges may be arranged "within the scope of collaboration," which Petain promised to Hitler in their Montoire meeting last year.

Vichy's note to Washington, it disclosed, refrained from any promise that France will not share the defense of her African Empire with the Axis but did emphasize that the situation in Indo-China where military bases were given to Japan was "something special" and does not apply to Africa or other parts of the empire.

The Paris press meantime continued its violent attacks on President Roosevelt, Welles and Admiral Leahy, the United States Ambassador to Vichy.

The Nazi-dominated newspapers asserted that a final German victory "cannot be doubted" and that France as a European power must align herself fully with the Axis powers.

London Hears Spain May Attack Morocco

London, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Speculation on a Spanish surprise move on French Morocco rose tonight when reports reached London that the leaves of all Spanish army officers and soldiers in Spanish Moroco have been cancelled since midnight Tuesday.

Certain quarters said there was reason to believe that Spain, having taken over full control of the Tangier international zone, might now move into French Morocco, which is under the military supervision of Gen. Weygand.

Vichy Puts Nazi Losses At 1,500,000

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Aug. 8.—Military observers in Vichy estimated today that the Germans have lost 1,500,000 men and the Russians 2,000,000 men on the Eastern Front.

The aggregate casualties thus far—on the forty-eighth day of the war—were described here as having already made the campaign the bloodiest in history.

Because of the desperate nature of the fighting these observers added, relatively few prisoners are being taken by either side.

Losses, it was said, are running as high as 70,000 daily.

In the battle of Smolensk alone, Nazi losses were placed at 5,000 a day in killed alone.

As to losses in material, experts here described them as fantastic, offering this approximate tabulation:

The Germans—7,500 tanks, 5,800 guns, 5,000 planes.

The Russians—9,000 tanks, 7,250 guns, 7,300 planes.

As to compensating production, neutral informants here expressed the opinion that German factories are producing about 1,800 planes a month out of a top potential of more than 2,500.

While Russian production is a great secret, it is believed here that the Soviet is producing as many first-line combat planes as are the Germans, although perhaps fewer training craft.

Vichy's estimates of casualties was thus between the Russian and German extremes.

Thus, Vichy's estimate agreed with Moscow's as to German losses, but more than tripled Moscow's acknowledgement of its own losses.

of two ways. German troops might try to reach Chinese Turkestan to join with Japanese troops driving west or pass through Afghanistan toward India while the Japanese launched an offensive from Indo-China on Burma and then on India.

Would Offer Peace

If the Russians collapsed, or when the Germans succeeded in establishing a strong defensive line, Germany would make a peace offer to Britain and the United States. Should peace be rejected and the Near East offensive fail, Germany might attempt an invasion of Britain.

Meanwhile, pressure would be exerted on France, Spain and Portugal for German occupation of Dakar and the Azores to unify the continent against Britain.

The military sources reported that the slow advance of the German Army had caused "visible disappointment" among the German population, who were more interested in the prospect of rapid occupation of the Ukraine than in capture of Smolensk or Leningrad.

Ukraine foods are expected to supplement German stores, but if the Ukraine is not occupied this month civilian rations will be reduced, the sources said.

Sailors Are Helping Army in Estonia, Moscow Asserts

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Saturday, Aug. 9.—Battles raged all day Friday on the bloody fronts before Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev, the Soviet army stated early today, and by naming towns around which fighting has been going on for days indicated that the Russian lines held firm.

The Red army fought the invaders at Kakisalmi, on the Karelian Isthmus about 75 miles northwest of Leningrad, and in Estonia, southwest of Leningrad, the Soviet information bureau announced in its regular communique. Battles also raged at Smolensk, before Moscow, and at Korosten and Bel Tserkov, on the front before Kiev.

The announcement said that the Red air force, "in cooperation with land troops, dealt blows at enemy panzer troops and infantry and attacked aircraft on airdromes." The Red air force destroyed 21 German aircraft and lost 14 of its own on Thursday, it was stated.

Russians Claim 14 Submarines

The Soviet navy organ Red Fleet reported that the Germans had lost 14 submarines in 44 days of war.

Four were said to have been destroyed by mines, one by collision with a Bulgarian destroyer in the Black Sea and others by Soviet naval action.

Estimating the total German submarine fleet at 150 craft, it was said the war had cost the Nazis nearly 10 per cent of their undersea boats.

Red Fleet said the Germans also lost more than 30 transports, 10 destroyers, 3 patrol boats, 2 monitors, 2 cutters and 2 trawlers. It pointed out that the Germans had been unable to transfer large warships into the Baltic.

Sailors Join Land Fighting

Sailors of the Red navy were reported to have joined the army in heavy land fighting on the Estonian front and Soviet citizens throughout invaded territories were called upon by their government to intensify guerrilla warfare.

A dispatch from the front reported that sailors from the Baltic fleet had recaptured a village after a three-day battle in their first land encounter with the Germans.

Facing superior numbers, the sailors were reported to have taken the village with a bayonet charge after an artillery duel.

The commander of the western front, Marshal Semeon K. Timoshenko, and Vice Premier Nikolai A. Bulganin, who is a member of the military council, issued an appeal to the population of German-occupied regions to intensify their guerrilla warfare.

Guerrillas Number Thousands

"Join partisan detachments, attack and exterminate enemy columns carrying gasoline, ammunition and provisions," the Soviet leaders urged. "Blow up bridges, cut telephone wires, burn buildings and forests in which Germans are hiding and let not a single ounce of food fall into the enemy's hands.

"Help the Red army rout the Hitler dogs! The hour of victory is near! Direct all strength to annihilation of the enemy!"

The total number of guerrillas is estimated now to be in the scores of thousands.

Advices from Leningrad and Kiev, the major cities behind the northern and southern flanks of the front, said that life continued normal there although at a wartime pace.

Not Encircled, Hull Tells Japan

"Do you mean the Japanese are encircling themselves?" a reporter required.

There is no occasion for any nation in the world that is law-abiding and peaceful, Hull answered, to become encircled by anybody but itself.

The remark was interpreted as a thrust at Japan's negotiations with Thailand and at the excuses given by Nippon for occupying Indo-China. The Japanese had charged that occupation of Indo-China was necessary to forestall a British-Free French-Chinese invasion of that French colony.

The Secretary of State gave evidence that there has been no relaxation of United States concern over the plight of Thailand. Hull gave official expression to growing concern, earlier this week.

Says Nazis Covet West

At the same time, the Secretary of State accused Germany of looking eyes at the Western Hemisphere for further conquest.

In answer to questions, he denounced as a transparent piece of propaganda German press charges that the United States wishes to subjugate Latin America.

That is so transparently propaganda, he said, that he did not think it deserved serious consideration by the people in this country.

He pointed out that the German assertions came from what he termed a group of persons representing a government that has ruthlessly seized some 15 countries in Europe and has been looking with longing eyes to this hemisphere for further conquest.

Hull's accusation against Germany was a reminder of official concern of the recent series of uprisings in Latin America, some of them of openly Nazi origin.

'Encirclement' Moves Stir Tokyo Press

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Aug. 8.—In conformity with the declaration that the Japanese government considers the military, economic and political encirclement of Japan by the A. B. C. D. powers (America, Britain, China and Dutch East Indies) as an established fact, the Japanese press continued today to denounce the alleged action of these powers and warn of the consequences.

Lieut. Commander Toga Ishimaru, writing in the newspaper Hochi, asserts that Great Britain and the United States with the support of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, the Soviet Union and the Netherlands East Indies have drawn a "cordon sanitaire" around Japan in order to strangle Japan's fighting power through embargoes. But, says Commander Ishimaru, Japan can survive the blow with the aid of China, Manchukuo, French Indo-China and Thailand, and as for getting oil from the Netherlands East Indies and rubber from Malay, "it might be a bit difficult but it should be a cinch if we tackle the problem after the German fashion."

Domei news agency reports from Bangkok that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's troops are marching to Burma, but the newspaper Nichi Nichi admits that contrary to previous charges, regular Chinese troops have not entered Burma.

The various rumors and reports abroad regarding Russo-Japanese border clashes and alleged Japanese demands on Russia are completely ignored here, though the Japanese press prints on its front pages the Moscow spokesman's denial of such reports. When questioned about Russia in a press conference, Koh Ishii, spokesman for the Cabinet Information Board, merely said that Russia's position "remains to be seen."

Meanwhile, the press charges that Britain is "oppressing" Thailand continue. The newspaper, Asahi reports from Bangkok that Britain is proposing joint defense measures to Thailand, and is demanding military bases in return for oil and other materials.

Otherwise, says the paper, Britain threatens to freeze Thai capital and to halt her supply of oil and hemp bags.

For the purpose of serving as an Anglo-American warning to Thailand not to become the "prey of Japan" the Yomiuri characterizes the warning as the "height of absurdity," and on the part of the United States especially, as the "action of a lunatic." At the most, says this paper, it is a "reactionary" threat against Thailand, and a reprisal for the Anglo-American failure to get French Indo-China as a spearhead against Japan's co-prosperity sphere.

Japanese Naval Units Leave Saigon

Saigon, French Indo-China, Aug. 8 (A.P.).—Part of the Japanese naval squadron which covered the landing of men and equipment here has left but whether it has quit Indo-China waters is not known.

An aircraft carrier, heavy and light cruisers and some destroyers are gone from their customary position in this river harbor, probably signifying that the first phase of the Japanese landing in their newly acquired southern Indo-China bases is completed.

About 60 per cent of the total expeditionary force is said to have been put ashore and it is understood the remainder is due in about ten days.

Reliable sources minimized a report that Japanese general headquarters would be established at Phnom Penh, about 150 miles east of the Thailand border.

Vichy, Aug. 8.—Gen. Henri Dentz, former high commissioner of Syria and Lebanon, who commanded the French resistance in Syria, and 35 of his officers are held as hostages by the British authorities in the mandate, it is learned here tonight.

They will be released when all the prisoners taken by the French have been released, it is understood.

'An Apple a Day . . .'

London, Aug. 8 (A.P.).—Ducking for apples on the open sea is a new accomplishment for at least one German submarine crew, the captain of a lost British ship related today.

A day after his vessel, loaded with South African oranges and apples, was torpedoed, he said, he saw the U-boat return to the scene and its crew fish out floating fruit.

The captain said that he was clinging to a raft a mile or, but that the Germans ignored it. A plane sighted the raft the next day and a ship was sent to the rescue.

Ship Losses High

Berlin, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Germany's air and sea war against Britain has sunk 340,000 tons of British shipping within a week, an authorized spokesman said tonight.

German planes have bombed Egypt 40 times since May 17, he said, and are once more increasing their destruction of Atlantic shipping.

Britain has lost 340,000 tons of shipping within the last week, he said, including 46,500 tons sunk and 29,000 tons more severely damaged and "considered lost" from a heavily guarded convoy. The newest major loss was announced earlier by the high command.

U. S. to Help Rebuild World, Berle Says

cord" to assure each country a full share in the economic life of the world, and each race the right to live "in conditions of equality and self-respect."

At a similar function on July 22, in honor of conquered Norway, Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, envisioned a new "association of nations" that would police the world and guarantee security.

Welles had set forth as conditions of peace the abolition of offensive armaments as well as the tools to make them, and abolition of economic inequality among nations.

The speeches by Welles and Berle, when read together, provided a first outline of American peace aims in the present war.

"Out of the shadows there emerge the outlines of the world to come," said Berle.

"In it, small nations will be able to live in freedom and in peace, in a family of nations ruled by law which respects the right of the weak as well as the strong. The basis of existence must be national. But a necessary conition must be general accord under which all countries are assured of participation in the economic life of the world; and under which all races are assured the right to live in conditions of equality and self-respect."

Berle in effect held out to warring Europe the promise of food, clothing and economic assistance after the present holocaust is over.

"In the day of reconstruction," he declared, "the voices of those who suffer now will not be forgotten. We are bold to think that the sorrow of the present is the prelude to a coming age more secure, more brilliant, more gracious and more free than any we have yet seen."

The reception at the Luxemburg Legation on Massachusetts Avenue yesterday was another one of those demonstrations of faith in a victory over Germany which are becoming a characteristic of the Capital.

Grand Duchess Charlotte, Prince Consort Felix and Prime Minister Pierre Dupong of Luxemburg, journeyed from Canada to attend the reception to honor Waller, who was held in great affection by the citizens of Luxemburg.

Berle's speech, as well as remarks by the grand duchess and by Waller were broadcast nationally and shortwaved to England. They will be rebroadcast tomorrow from London for the benefit of radio listeners inside the duchy, which is now under Nazi rule.

Waller, who was asked to leave Luxemburg by the German government, returned here recently aboard the U. S. transport West Point.

House May Balk at Holding Selects

Guardsmen and reserves could be held for 30 months, while Regular Army men who enlisted for three years could be kept 4½ years. The measure removes the present limitation of 900,000 on the number of selectees who can be kept in the Army at any one time.

The Mead amendment, calling for a $10 pay increase for every soldier for every month served beyond one year, appeared likely to get House approval, but it was doubtful whether the "bonus" plan would win over any doubtful votes for the bill itself.

Technically, the House is not yet considering the Senate-approved bill, but is debating the measure reported out by its Military Affairs Committee, following the original War Department recommendations and calling for an indefinite extension of service. No serious effort will be made in the House, however, to fight for any extension beyond 18 months.

House speeches yesterday followed the pattern of the week-long Senate debate, with opponents of the bill arguing that retention of selectees after their first year of service would be "a breach of faith" and that the international situation is actually less threatening today than a year ago, when the one-year Selective Service Act was passed.

Majority Leader McCormack said the bill had been described by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, as essential to the Nation's security "and we cannot repudiate his recommendations without assuming full responsibility."

"Our job, whether we like it or not," he said, "is to preserve what we have inherited."

Representative Smith, of Virginia, one of a score of Southern Democrats who appealed for prompt passage of the bill, told the House:

"If the national interest isn't imperiled, why have we appropriated 40 billion dollars for defense?

"If the national interest is imperiled, let's not sit around and discuss whether we should defend America for 6 months or 12 months or 18 months."

Red Planes Bomb Berlin, Starting Fires

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 8.—Russian warplanes dropped a number of high explosive and incendiary bombs in the Berlin area last night in the first Soviet raid on the German capital, the Moscow radio reported tonight.

[Soviet warplanes, for the second day in succession, early today bombed military objectives in the vicinity of Berlin, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Moscow.]

The Soviet report described the raid as a reconnaissance flight undertaken by a group of planes, the size of which was not stated. A number of fires were declared to have been started, after which all the Russian planes returned to their bases safely.

It was pointed out that the craft must have flown at least 600 miles to their targets.

The Germans officially acknowledged "minor damage to buildings" and reported that several civilians were killed. The German command attributed the assault to "individual planes" and stated that six of the raiders were brought down. Unofficially it was said in Berlin that it was the eightieth raid on the city.

An authorized Nazi spokesman insisted that the bombers were "undoubtedly British" and asserted that through their disclaimer the British "are doubtless trying to inject a new, intriguing note and awaken a hope that the Russians will start visiting us."

To this, however, the British responded that British offensive aerial action overnight was limited to attacks on Essen, Dortmund and Hamm in western Germany, the docks at Boulogne, airdromes in Denmark and shipping off the Dutch coast.

Moscow reported that there was no German raid on Moscow last night, although the city had been raided 14 times in the last 16 nights.

Japan Reported Clearing Siberian Border of Civilians

Shanghai, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Japan has ordered all nationals not in military service to evacuate a wide area along the Siberian border in western Manchukuo, reliable sources said today as observers reported that Russo-Japanese relations might be nearer the breaking point than Japanese relations with Thailand.

The order, it was said, covers all Japanese civilians in an area from Manchuli, on the western frontier with Siberia, to Tsitsihar, 350 miles east of Manchuli where sporadic clashes have been reported recently between Japanese and Russian troops.

At the same time the Dutch consulate here announced that the Dutch government had advised its nationals to leave north central China if possible.

Rehiring a Success, Hillman Reports

Auto Workers, Idle Because of Defense, Placed in New Jobs

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Complete success in the first "test case" attempt to find new defense jobs for 3,600 displaced auto workers was announced yesterday by OPM cochief Sidney Hillman. Concurrently, the OPM also made public a program expected to alleviate the problem of 25,000 unemployed silk hosiery workers.

Hillman said reports from his aides, dispatched earlier this week to the Chevrolet plant at Buffalo, N. Y., closed down for a six-month retooling period, indicated that through cooperative machinery set up by Government, labor unions and management of defense industries in the area, 800 auto workers have already been rehired and 500 more will be employed at once.

Arthur S. Flemming, chief of the OPM labor supply branch, predicted that half of the 3,600 would be provided jobs in other defense plants within a month, and that jobs were promised to the remainder as soon as they completed a three to five weeks retraining program.

Defense training facilities in the public vocational schools will be readjusted to meet the emergency, he added. He pointed out that each trainee will receive $15 a week as unemployment compensation during the schooling period.

Program for Silk

The silk program, announced by a special joint commodity section set up by the OPM and the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, called for all members of the silk hosiery industry:

1. To use only 50 per cent silk in stocking manufacture, making the balance out of materials other than silk or nylon.
2. To fabricate only half the available nylon supply into all-nylon stockings, using the remainder in combination with other yarns in a 50 per cent nylon stocking.
3. To buy rayon only for current consumption.

Admittedly only a stop-gap to the problem created by ending Japanese silk imports, the program is nevertheless expected to keep plants operating from three to six weeks, permitting some rehiring of the 25,000 workers already displaced through hosiery mill shutdowns, and postponing for that period the loss of jobs of the industry's remaining 75,000 employes.

It was believed that the industry itself had proposed the program and compliance was expected.

The 50 per cent silk stocking, according to industry representatives, will be identical in appearance with present hose. The remaining 50 per cent of cotton or rayon will presumably be used in the foot and top.

OPM officials indicated that the "Buffalo program" would provide a pattern liable to be duplicated in hundreds of other situations, particularly in the auto, washing machine, refrigerator and other durable consumer goods factories faced with shutdowns through diversion of raw materials to defense plants.

According to OPACS Administrator Leon Henderson, testifying yesterday before the House Banking and Currency Committee, as many as two million workers may lose their jobs through such shutdowns.

OPM officials, however, believe the problem can be approached through arrangements modeled after those in Buffalo, where union leaders, promising full cooperation, are aiding in the registration at public employment offices of the idle auto workers, and are actively seeking jobs for them in other industries.

The defense plants in the area which promised to give the auto workers jobs are the Bell Aircraft Corporation, Worthington Pump & Machinery Corporation, Buffalo Arms Corporation and the Curtiss-Wright Corporation.

Seizure Sure If Shipyard Strike Goes On

Tentative proposals for Government seizure of the strike-bound Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. crystallized yesterday into a firm decision to take over the vital yards early next week unless the management accepts a Defense Mediation Board recommendation for settling its labor dispute, it was learned from reliable sources.

It was not known whether the determination to defer action over the weekend was made to await the return of President Roosevelt to the Capital, or to give the Kearny (N. J.) company additional time in which to accede to the board's proposal.

Peter Flynn, vice president of a C. I. O. shipbuilding workers local, said in a statement at Jersey City, N. J., that Government action should be taken "without another hour's delay."

"The yards, Flynn said, "the picket

If the Government does take over line will instantly become a marching line of American workers rushing back to pick up where they left off one of the most vital jobs in the national defense program."

A clear intimation both of the impending action and of the Navy Department's agreement with the known views of acting Mediation Board Chairman Frank Graham and OPM Labor Chief Sidney Hillman that the yards should be taken over, came yesterday from Acting Navy Secretary Ralph A. Bard.

Calls for Quick Action

Bard, who had been in close touch with Hillman throughout the day, issued a statement declaring that "steps must be taken which will in one way or another" put the plant back into production "at the earliest possible moment."

Bard's statement, terming the strike "most regrettable," also declared that it was not the Navy's function to settle labor disputes. Observers believed that this implied Bard would not attempt to reargue the merits of the case, but would abide by the Mediation Board's determination, calling for the company to grant the striking C. I. O. shipbuilding workers union a clause guaranteeing maintenance of union membership.

A new defense strike, possibly of serious proportions, flared yesterday in the Curtiss-Wright propeller division plant at Caldwell, N. J.

Several hundred workmen from the steel blade and welding departments walked out and expressed determination to shut the plant down until demands for higher wages were met.

Follows Plant Election

The strike followed the announcement of a National Labor Relations Board election Thursday, won by an independent union opposing the A. F. of L. machinists. Officials of both organizations, however, denied that they had authorized the strike.

A strikes' committee insisted that the men walked out "simply because we want more money." The company president, however, declared that the strikers "walked out simply because they did not win yesterday's election."

The Federal Shipbuilding strike, beginning Wednesday midnight, has completely halted work on between 450 and 500 million dollars worth of Navy and Maritime Commission construction.

Nazis Preparing To Occupy Italy

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The Germans are building barracks in Italy to billet an eventual German army of occupation, 300,000 men strong, it was learned here yesterday from a reliable source.

Such a German army would serve two purposes, it was understood—to prevent the landing of British troops on Italian territory and to take control of Italy in case of popular outbreaks against the Fascist regime.

Proposed U. S. Air Force Only Half Luftwaffe Size, Says Olds

By the Associated Press

The United States, Col. Robert Olds said yesterday, will have an air force only half the present size of Germany's Luftwaffe even when the current expansion program is completed.

Col. Olds, veteran military flier, heads the Army's new ferry command which delivers warplanes from factories to ports for shipment overseas.

"The Luftwaffe has seven independent air forces and more than a million officers and men," Olds wrote in the periodical Flying and Popular Aviation. "We have four such forces and about 180,000 officers and men in our Army Air Force organization.

Long Range Fighters

Other official sources reported that latest revised plans contemplate some 83 groups of combat planes and more than 300,000 officers and men to fly and maintain them. Such a force is not expected to be realized for a year or more, even though the rate of training pilots is to be stepped up this fall to 30,000 a year and upward of 80,000 warplanes are on order now in American plants for the Army, Navy and Great Britain.

Meanwhile, following the lead of Britain's Royal Air Force and Germany's Luftwaffe, the Army offered military flying careers yesterday to air-minded soldiers between the ages of 18 and 22 who lack sufficient formal schooling to become officer-pilots.

Those accepted must already be in service, single, under 23, of excellent character and sound physique, and graduates of a high school or other secondary school. They must agree to serve at least three additional years.

The new regulations provided that enlisted men winning their wings should hold ratings of staff, technical or master sergeant pilot, with pay ranging from $108 to $189 a month.

Duce Goes Home to Bury Son; Flowers Strewn Before Cortege

By the Associated Press

Predappio, Italy, Aug. 8.—Premier Mussolini came home today to bury his second-born son, Bruno, killed yesterday in the crash of an experimental warplane. The funeral will be tomorrow morning.

A special train carried the body, the family mourners and high ranking Fascists to Forli from Pisa where the 23-year-old air captain died.

From Forli to Predappio, Il Duce's home town, the funeral procession continued by automobile.

It was here that Bruno's grandfather was a village blacksmith and his grandmother taught school. The body was placed in the new Fascist headquarters of Predappio, the head swathed in bandages. Villagers were permitted to file past the body until the hour of the funeral.

Friends found it difficult to draw Bruno's mother, Donna Rachele, away from the casket. With the body lay a photo of Bruno's widow and his 17-month-old daughter. Donna Rachele had clutched her son's cap and sword to her breast whenever the casket was moved on the journey to Predappio.

At Pisa, Forli and Predappio children strewed flowers in front of the cortege and other flowers rained from balconies and windows.

In the family group were all the closest relatives save Foreign Minister Count Galeazo Ciano, husband of Bruno's sister, Edda. He remained in Rome, not feeling well enough for the trip.

The premier and his family followed the casket into the building while in its tower the bells tolled. The parish priest blessed the body. Long prayers were recited. Il Duce stood motionless for a long time and then saluted the body with outstretched arm and walked away.

Ensigns Whose Plane Beheaded Woman Get Prison Terms

Pensacola, Fla., Aug. 8.—Two ensigns, court-martialed at the Naval Air Station here May 20 after their low-flying plane decapitated a woman working in an Alabama turnip field, were dismissed from the service and sent to prison today after conviction on involuntary manslaughter charges.

The ensigns were Joseph C. Thompson, of Healdburg, Calif., and Paul C. Brown, of Chicago.

Brown, pilot of the plane which decapitated Mrs. Robert Phillips, of Robertsville, Ala., on March 25, was sentenced to 24 months, and Thompson, his passenger, was sentenced to 12 months.

The court-martial ended May 20 and the findings were sent to Secretary of the Navy Knox, who today returned to Capt. A. C. Read, commandant of the station here, ordera sustaining the court-martial's findings.

Knox approved the convictions July 26 and they were sent to President Roosevelt, who approved them July 29, Capt. Read said.

The ensigns were convicted, also, on a charge of conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline.

On a charge of carelessly endangering the lives of others containing five counts, Thompson was convicted on four and Brown on one.

Their sentence said they were to be dismissed and be imprisoned at hard labor in "such prison or penitentiary as the convening authority may designate."

Immediately after the flight during which Mrs. Phillips was killed the ensigns returned here and reported to their superior officer. They were held in quarters during the subsequent investigation which led to be the court-martial.

Canada Soon Will Recruit Sixth Division

Ottawa, Ontario, Aug. 8.—Canada's army is steadily expanding. Today Defense Minister Col. James L. Ralston announced authorization to form a sixth division so that the Dominion will have three in Britain and three in training at home enlisted for overseas service. This sixth division will be formed largely from existing reserve units and all three brigades will be fully equipped.

With the formation of this division Canada will have 300,000 men on active service, divided as follows: Two hundred and 20 thousand in the army, 60,000 in the air force and 20,000 in the navy. In addition she has 170,000 men drafted for the duration of the war for home defense.

Col. Ralston at a press conference today insisted the men now drafted under the four-month training scheme were all liable for service for the duration of the war and that no other time was set for their release.

"They are all engaged for the defense of this country," he said, "and it is with pleasure that I draw to your attention that 50,000 more than are drafted for home defense have enlisted for overseas service. Out of the first four-month class of 4,021, a total of 2,414 enlisted in the Regular Army."

Recruits, the minister said, have been coming in at between 325 and 350 per week and as soon as harvesting is over it is expected the rate will increase.

Now that arms production in Canada has reached a steady flow it is hoped to equip the new division fully on this side and give it a more intensive training than the others now overseas were able to receive before they left.

Col. Ralston also announced enlistment of the Canadian Women's Army Corps would begin almost immediately. Eight hundred and thirty women have been asked for the first of September and 1,500 will be asked for within the next three months.

Americans Ready For Part in War, Editor Declares

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—Herbert S. Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, representing the Fight for Freedom Committee on a trip to London, declared today a belief that the American people are "ready at this point to answer their obligation" for active participation in the war.

"No one can stay out of this world revolution against civilization," he told the audience at a luncheon given in his honor by the American Outpost, an organization of Americans in Britain. "You can either resist it or you can lie supinely and give in to it.

"The only way to win a war is to fight it.

"We have got to win this war together. Don't do anything to encourage us in the idea that if we produce enough tools the war will be won by somebody else."

Archbishop Zonghi, Papal Noble, Dies

Archbishop Giovanni Maria Zonghi, president of the Pontifical Academy of Ecclesiastical Nobles, and last surviving member of the court of Pope Pius IX, died yesterday at Fabriano, Italy, the Associated Press reported from Vatican City. He was 94.

The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and Catholic University rector, yesterday recalled that Archbishop Zonghi had been stenographer of the Vatican Council for several years, and that he had met him during visits to Rome. Archbishop Zonghi served as Academy president from 1927.

Pope Pius IX died in 1878.

Dies Links Henderson To Red Groups

By the Associated Press

While Leon Henderson was advocating the Administration's price-control bill yesterday before a Congressional committee as a weapon of democracy, he was denounced on the House floor by Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, as having been a member of "five communist-controlled organizations."

"I wouldn't put him in charge of dog catchers," Dies shouted. "The time has come to speak frankly."

Dies did not mention Henderson by name on the House floor, merely saying he was referring to man who was about to be placed in charge of all price-fixing. Off the floor, however, he told newsmen he meant Henderson, who is head of the Office of Price Administration.

The Administrator, testifying before the House Banking Committee, described the price-control bill as one of a number of steps which a democracy must take to offset the dislocating effects of a huge defense program "unless chaos is to take charge."

"Democracy does not mean laissez-faire in an emergency," he said.

In response to questions, he said he favored giving the Federal Reserve Board power to increase reserve requirements so as to curb the amount of bank credit and also said it would be "highly desirable" for banks to limit the loans they make for speculative purposes.

Henderson Questioned

Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, led Henderson through a maze of questioning about Administration fiscal and economic policies of the last few years. At one point, Henderson said he thought the idea that prices could be controlled through revaluing the dollar was "lousy" and declared he had never believed the Nation's economic situation could be saved through "funny money business" or "jiggling with gold."

He asserted that when the Administration suddenly curtailed Government spending in the fall of 1937 "we went to hell in a wheel barrow." In that connection, he said he had spent three or four hours with President Roosevelt telling him that such a course was wrong.

Earlier, Henderson said temporary unemployment of 2,000,000 persons might develop during the transition of American industry from peace-time to defense production.

Forecast Trouble

He said the Nation was going to have to "pay dearly" for a lack of planning and for underestimates of certain defense needs.

Shortages of raw materials for civilian needs are beginning to develop, he said and plant closings are going to result because of judgements which had to be made 18 months ago and which he conceded had been short of the mark.

Turning to other subjects, he renewed his suggestion for a 50 per cent slash in automobile production and told the committee there were "definite indications" that the backlog of unassigned defense contracts would require "even more than 50 per cent of the automobile industry's productive facilities."

In that connection, he said the automobile industry "wants the cut" and wants a speedy decision on the matter so as to be able to plan ahead.

Acrobats Offer U. S. New Sort Of Troupes

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 8.—Troops shot from cannon!

Don't laugh. It's the latest suggestion for modern warfare.

Add to that coup the trapeze artist swinging a la Tarzan from tree to tree to capture snipers' nests and you have the ultra modern warfare the International Association of Acrobats offers the United States Army.

And after the advance from 1918 methods to those of the Luftwaffe and the panzer divisions, who can say it's impossible?

In convention assembled at Atlantic City these fantastic ideas will be made public tomorrow and George A. Hamid, acting president of the "swing through the air" boys, is serious. He says:

"I suggest that acrobats throughout he country offer the United Staes Government their services, in case of war, to serve as super-trouble-shooters, men trained to take risks with cool nerves, to perform feats impossible to ordinary men.

"How could space be covered more quickly than by swinging through the air? And who could do that beter than a trained man?

"Suppose a man had to get over the enemy's lines to intercept a message; to wipe out a machine gun nest. How could he get there more quickly and surprisingly than by being shot out of a cannon in a way the Zacchini brothers made famous?"

But Hamid hasn't started!

He visualizes Clyde Beatty or Terrell Jacobs with 50 or 100 wild beasts brought to the front line in cages—then released at the enemy.

"It seems logical," says he seemingly illogical Hamid, "that the beasts, under a capable master, could strike terror to the enemy and perhaps cause a retreat in panic."

St. Lawrence Plan Added to Omnibus Bill

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee voted today to include the controversial St. Lawrence seaway and Florida ship canal projects in an omnibus rivers and harbors bill which some members estimated might require appropriations totaling a billion dollars.

At an executive session, the committee quickly approved by a 17-to-8 vote the 285 million dollars St. Lawrence development advocated by President Roosevelt as a national defense project, and then indorsed the 160 million dollars Florida ship canal, 14 to 10, after first providing that tolls should be charged for use of the waterway in order to make it self-liquidating.

Opponents of the two projects immediately forecast a bitter fight when the bill is brought before the House.

"This will be the biggest pork barrel rivers and harbors bill in the history of Congress," asserted Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, an opponent of both the seaway and the Florida ship canal.

Representative Bender (Republican), of Ohio, issued a statement describing the committee action with respect to the St. Lawrence as "an entirely indefensible effort to push through a highly controversial measure by attaching it to a series of juicy pork barrel projects designed to capture votes."

Another seaway opponent, Representative Leonard Hall (Republican), of New York, said the committee action was "an abject confession of the utter inability to justify the St. Lawrence project on the grounds either of national defense need or national economic benefits."

Representative Mansfield (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the committee, said on Wednesday that President Roosevelt wanted the seaway placed in the omnibus bill. He said he had received a letter from the President on the subject.

Congress Group To See Glider

The first all metal glider to be built by the Government and one of the first of its kind in the country will be demonstrated at the Congressional Airport at 10:15 this morning. The craft was built by members of an NYA group at Lake Cassidy, Michigan, and brought to Washington on a trailer.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who recently introduced a bill into Congress to authorize an NYA glider program in connection with national defense efforts, is expected to be present at the demonstration, along with several other members of Congress.

Col. Britton Urges Continent to Buy Food, Foil Nazis

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—Col. Britton, British broadcaster leading the "V" army campaign, urged the people of German-occupied territories today to "buy anything and everything and make quite certain nothing is left for the Germans."

He advised those with savings to buy food and other supplies now "before your money becomes worthless."

To farmers starting their harvests, he declared:

"There are ways in which you can keep your crops hidden . . . I just want to remind you that in a few weeks time, Nazi agents will be coming around demanding to know what you've got and offering you paper money in exchange. Well, you will know what to do."

House Group To Introduce New Roads Bill

By the Associated Press

The House Roads Committee decided yesterday to introduce a new defense highway bill to replace the 320 million dollar measure vetoed by President Roosevelt.

Chairman Cartwright (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was authorized to call the roads group together for this purpose sometime after an expected recess, in September or October, with indications that the new bill would contain principal provisions of the vetoed measure.

At a general strategy session, some members suggested that the committee reintroduce the identical bill yesterday that lost by a two-vote margin Thursday in the House attempt to override the Presidential veto. The House voted 251 to 128 to override the veto, with a two-thirds majority required. The Senate had voted 57 to 19 to override.

Both Democrats and Republicans were said to have agreed, however, that this might displease some of their supporters. The chief complaint heard in the committee was that the President sought to retain entire control over all Federal roads funds in order to ignore Congressional apportionment on the basis of population.

"We lost this fight," Cartwright said, "but we will not abdicate from the principal of Federal highway aid."

Suez Canal Kept In Use, Despite Constant Bombing

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Suez Canal is being kept open as a supply line for American munitions, planes and food destined for British armies in Egypt in spite of constant bombing by Axis planes, returning American oil men said today.

They told a graphic story of constant bombings or laying of mines by Axis planes in the narrow 103-miles-long canal and of British efforts to remove the blasted wreckage of ships that blocked the lifeline.

Gigantic cranes, they said, operated along the canal to remove wreckage. Some of the machines were described as American-made and capable of clearing the wreckage in two days after dynamite had completed the destruction wrought by dive-bombers or mines.

They said that the canal had been blocked on numerous occasoins by wrecked ships, causing serious delays.

(Axis communiques have frequently claimed the canal was unusable by the British. The British have been silent about damage done.)

Morgenthau Asks Broader Taxing Base

lion dollars more than the House bill.

Not estimated in this increase was a renewed Treasury request for individual surtaxes starting at 11 per cent on the first taxable dollar. The House started surtaxes at 5 per cent.

Sullivan said higher rates were needed to help curb inflationary tendencies and to produce more revenue.

Like Sullivan and, across the Capitol, Price Administrator Leon Henderson, Morgenthau said heavier taxes were needed all around to "help prevent the demoralization which would result from inflation."

Such a program, the Treasury chief said, will build public morale behind the defense effort, unite the Nation by distributing the defense burden, and strengthen confidence by reducing necessity for Treasury borrowing.

Along with increased taxes, he asked "the maximum reduction in the ordinary nondefense expenditures of Government," to relieve the defense burden at every possible point.

Stressing the shift in the defense fiscal picture since the Treasury originally said $3,500,000,000 would finance two-thirds of operating expenses, Morgenthau said above budget increases have since reached 14 billion dollars and 1942 fiscal year spending is now estimated at $22,-169,000,000.

Questioned by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, he conceded it may well go above that to 25 billion dollars or more.

Sullivan told the committee that if the Senate restores the House bill to $3,500,000,000, it would still be $1,900,000,000 short of the Treasury's two-thirds "pay-as-you-go" plan.

Vandenberg commented that Morgenthau in April had remarked it was "doubtful what would happen to the public credit" if this ratio of taxes to borrowing was not attained.

The Treasury was invited to submit tax recommendations to meet the ratio, but it appeared doubtful the committee would attempt in the present bill to raise the full $5,-400,000,000 because of the need for speed.

Morgenthau emphasized the need for prompt passage, saying delays are costing the Treasury millions each day in excise taxes. He said seven months of the year have elapsed and taxpayers should know quickly what taxes will be asked of them retroactively.

Fails to Outline Economies

The Treasury head did not mention what nondefense costs could be cut to bring economies he asked, and Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, suggested the President, Congressional leaders and the Treasury agree on a specific retrenchment program.

Renewal of the joint return recommendation of the President was accorded little chance in the Senate committee, as was the call for taxation of profits on invested capital standards. Committeemen lean to the House optional profits tax and say it would be futile to revive House-defeated joint returns.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, one of the community property States at which joint returns are aimed, took issue with the proposal and Senate Majority Leader Barkley said joint returns would "tend to break down" independence of women in control of their property.

Barkley asked Sullivan to submit suggestions for bringing the bill to four million dollars revenue "with and without" inclusion of joint returns.

Accompanying Morgenthau's suggestion for a simplified tax form for persons earning under $3,000 was an illustrative chart, showing how the plan would operate. Taxpayers would merely fill out their salary and other income, the total, and take the tax to be paid from a table prepared by the Treasury.

The table started taxes at $750 on single persons and $1,500 for married persons and based rates on the House bill. A tax was listed for each income block, based on the average of the tax on lower or upper limit of the block. In each case the tax was reduced by 10 per cent as the rough equivalent for deductions from income. Lower bracket taxpayers would have the option of filing the regular income tax return, and all those making over $3,000 would be required to file as usual.

TREASURY TABLE shows how Secretary Morgenthau's plan to simplify tax forms would operate for persons earning $3,000 or less. The table starts exemptions at $750 for single persons and $1,500 for married. A lower-bracket taxpayer would merely add up his total income and find on the table the amount of tax due from him. Rates are the same as in the House-passed tax bill but exemptions start lower. Incomes are grouped in blocks of $25 with the same tax payable for all incomes within the block. The taxpayer would NOT have to compute his deductions. The table makes allowance for them by reducing the average tax in each block by 10 per cent as a rough equivalent for deductions. The Treasury said the above schedule is "purely illustrative" girl scompanied Park Policeman Charles Mellot in one car.

Girl Menaced At Lincoln Memorial

The girl viewed the suspects in a lineup at Park Police Headquarters and agreed to return for another lineup if other suspects were apprehended. Today she will look over Metropolitan Police files of suspected and convicted sex criminals.

Arrested in Park

The new suspects in the Rock Creek Park assault case, both Negroes, were held at Sixth Precinct Police Station, where a Negro arrested less than an hour after the attack is still in custody.

One, a 22-year-old man, was apprehended in the park near the scene of the attack. Wearing a tan slack suit, he answered the general description given by the victim of her attacker. Policeman H. E. Moore, of Sixth Precinct, arrested him as the suspect wandered aimlessly in the park. The man's wife also was held for questioning.

One Found in Maryland

The other suspect taken yesterday was picked up in nearby Maryland by Detective Sergt. John Caton, of the Washington police. Likewise in a tan slack suit, he also wore a sun helmet of the type worn by the attacker.

Police expect to have the girl view the latest suspects in a lineup, possibly today. However, she is still under a physician's care for nervousness and poison ivy, results of her experience with her attacker.

The first suspect arrested was viewed by the girl Thursday at a police lineup, and while she could not definitely identify him she said he resembled the man who attacked her. Another suspect who appeared in that lineup was released yesterday.

Although the girl could not identify the suspect Thursday, there is a wealth of circumstantial evidence against him. He wore a tan slack suit similar to that she described and bloodstains were found on his body and clothes. His explanation of them proved false. He wore no hat at the time, but the sun helmet, found near the scene of the crime, fitted him perfectly; he had a bottle of wine when he attacked the girl. When arrested, he had a bottle of wine. He has told a number of conflicting stories as to his whereabouts at the time of the attack. Police declare that he cannot account for a space of two hours just before and after the crime was committed.

Police have located the merchant who sold the suspect the wine. However, there is some doubt as to the time he purchased it. The merchant said he thinks the man bought the wine at about 11 a. m. on the day of the attack. The girl was assaulted at about 10:30 a. m. Police are still checking this angle.

Meanwhile a 48-year-old Mount Rainier, Md., man was arrested late in the day after he lured a 7-year-old girl into a vacant house in the 600 block of Third Street Northwest.

The child said the man did not molest her, but he was frightened out of the building soon after entering it with the girl, with whom he struck up an acquaintance in nearby Pension Park.

A bystander saw him take the child into the house and notified Traffic Sergt. J. O. Hite, who was in the vicinity. Apparently frightened by the commotion outside, the man ran out of the house but was apprehended by the policeman.

An angry crowd of about 150 persons congregated at the police call box before the patrol wagon arrived. For minutes Sergt. Hite feared violence against the suspect, who was taken to First Precinct Station and held for investigation.

Leniency Shown Plane Strikers Irks UAW

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Revolting against their top leaders, delegates to the convention of the United Auto Workers Union affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations late today noisily turned down a committee report which was described as "whitewashing" the outlaw strike against the North American Aircraft Corporation at Inglewood, Calif., last June.

The strike was called by local leaders against the orders of President Philip Murray of the C. I. O., President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers (as the U. A. W.-C. I. O. yesterday voted to call itself), and Richard T. Frankensteen, director of the union's aircraft division. It was broken only by the United States Army. At the time, and frequently since, Frankensteen charged that the strike was staged by Communists to embarrass the national defense program.

For the past week the convention's grievance committee has been hearing evidence, in connection with the strike and the role in it of Lew Michener, executive board member for the West Coast region, against whom formal charges were preferred by eight fellow board members. Today the committee startled the convention by recommending extremely lenient measures against those involved in the outlaw strike.

The committee urged that the convention "fully justify" the actions of Murray, Thomas and Frankensteen in opposing the strike and attempting to get the workers back to their jobs pending negotiations before the Defense Mediation Board. Then the committee recommended that the West Coast region be placed under the control of the union's executive board until the board feels the region can properly administer its own affairs. No mention was made of Michener, although later it was explained that he was free to run for reelection to the executive board.

A storm of protest came from the floor of the convention, although Frankensteen, who only 48 hours ago favored suspending Michener for one year, said he supported the committee's report, and President Thomas announced that he, too, favored it.

The leaders of the delegates' revolt today were Walter Reuther and his younger brother, Victor.

Fahey Asserts Board's Vote On N. Y. Shift Was Unanimous

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, yesterday issued a statement calling attention to the unanimity of the vote of board members in deciding on the projected move to New York.

"It is, of course, true," he said in part, "that moving from Washington will involve some inconvenience not only to board members, but other employes, and it will mean some extra work for our executives, but when the transfer is effected there will be no interference with the efficiency of our operation.

"It is my opinion," he added, "that every Government department and agency in Washington that can, in this emergency, possibly make room available for defense units which must be here, should do so as quickly as possible and forget personal inconvenience.

"An especially favored section of the civil population in the present emergency should, in the common interest, respond as readily to the wishes of the Commander in Chief as do armed forces."

Besides emphasizing that the votes of the four members of the board who were in the city were unanimous in authorizing the lease of space in New York, Fahey stated:

"All four members of the board also voted alike on necessary resolutions providing for the removal of our three agencies.

"The statement to the press on August 5," he said, "announcing that members of the board as well as other executives and employes should make the move, was also approved by the four members of the board who were present, without a single negative suggestion.

"It is true," he added, "that when removal from Washington was first discussed, the members of the board, in common with most of our employes, expressed their preference for remaining in Washington. It was agreed, however, that if we were to move the board could not discriminate in its own favor by insisting that its members and certain well-paid executives should continue to live in Washington while hundreds of employes of moderate incomes were being asked to move at considerable discomfort and in some cases at material sacrifice."

shot hope that a ship he might be on would touch the United States, permitting him to see the children.

How he got here can't be related and how long he will stay at Clover Croft was unknown yesterday, even to him. It depends on things. That the children would see him was unknown to them until he met them in New York City Thursday.

They had been told that a little trip awaited them. No one wanted them to be disappointed, because their father might not be waiting when they arrived. And he hadn't heard a word about them for five months, when up they came to him, in company of Barbara Ravenscroft and Margaret Leechman, who had taken them from England and been with them ever since in Virginia.

He saw Gillian 5¼ inches taller. Christopher had grown 3½ inches. What they said when they met him, the officer couldn't relate.

"They were thrilled," he remembered. "They were very happy."

And, a day later, he couldn't, himself, fix his eyes on the startling sights of Washington, all the New World sights he never had seen before. He had only one lament: "That their mother isn't here."

Morgenthau Backs Repeal of Silver Purchase Laws

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday told the Senate Finance Committee that he favored repeal of all the silver purchase laws.

Questioned by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, on how much the silver purchasing act was costing the Government during his testimony on the defense tax bill, Morgenthau said:

"I would not object if Congress were to wipe all the silver purchasing legislation off the books."

He told the committee, however, he would oppose any tampering with the gold purchasing laws.

Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, reminded Morgenthau that by wiping out all the silver purchasing laws, the domestic silver purchasing law as well as the foreign would be eliminated.

"That's right," Morgenthau blandly asserted.

Locher Assails Bill to Reduce Employer Tax

Opposition of organized labor to lower employer contributions to the District unemployment compensation fund without increased benefits to workers was promised last night by John Locher, a member of the Unemployment Compensation Board and president of the Central Labor Union.

A bill rewriting the compensation law and lowering the tax on employers from 2.7 to 0.5 per cent was introduced yesterday by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi. The measure carries the present maximum employe benefits of $18 a week for 19 weeks.

Points to National A. F. of L.

"If employers want this deduction, then labor will demand increased benefits," Locher declared. "We will oppose any bill that would lower contributions of employers without giving workers a maximum of $20 a week for 20 weeks of unemployment."

Locher warned that "strenuous" objection to the bill, as now written, will come not only from local labor organizations, but from national leaders of the American Federation of Labor.

The bill embodies provisions of a measure introduced several weeks ago by McGehee to set up a sliding scale of employer contributions based on total yearly payments to the compensation fund and total yearly benefits paid. The contribution rates would be 0.5, 1.2, 2 and 2.7 per cent.

With the fund at its present level —21 million dollars as of August 1—the tax rate would remain at the 0.5 per cent level for at least five years, McGehee said. The bill proposes to make the new rates effective next January.

Benefits for Soldiers

The new bill, McGehee stated, is intended, among other things, to bring the local law into conformity with the Federal Social Security Act and proposed Federal legislation for State unemployment security.

Dream Offices May Cost D. C. Millions

a traffic load far beyond present capacities.

Cost of constructing approaches on the Virginia side of the river was estimated at between seven and eight million dollars. To enable existing bridges to carry the increased traffic load, the subcommittee was told it would be necessary to advance priorities on at least three roadway remodelling projects in the District.

One of these would involve drastic changes in roadways around the Lincoln Memorial where plans call for extension of Independence Avenue, widening Twenty-third Street north of the Memorial and building an underpass to carry Riverside Drive traffic beneath traffic crossing the Memorial Bridge.

In a memorandum prepared by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the subcommittee was told it will be possible for Memorial Bridge, after the approaches have been improved, to carry 11,000 autos during morning rush hours and 9,800 northbound cars during the evening rush hours. This is from two to three times the present capacity of the bridge.

The improvements, it was said, will be sufficient to handle traffic to the building, which ultimately would house 42,000 employes, but the memorandum warned:

"The ensuing accelerated growth of Arlington and Fairfax counties and Alexandria will undoubtedly advance the time when a new crossing or crossings of the Potomac River will be required."

Opponents of locating the building in Arlington County, it was reported, fell down in the controversy with War Department officials because they were unable to agree on a site in the District. Several possible sites in the District were discussed, including the Federal rectangle in the vicinity of the War Department building at Twenty-first Street and Virginia Avenue Northwest, but none of them was deemed entirely satisfactory.

The Soldiers' Home grounds was considered unlikeliest of all sites discussed, because of the uneven terrain.

Gilmore D. Clarke, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, indicated how the battle was going when he emerged from the hearing room and observed:

"It looks like the War Department is going to win. The only question remaining is esthetic, and the War Department can't understand that."

Have Naval Support

A high Navy officer struck a blow for the Army by telling the subcommittee the Navy Department supported the War Department in its plans for expansion. Should the War Department evacuate its new building and the Munitions Building, these structures would be turned over to the Navy. The Navy, it was said, will then have all the space it needs in one section of the city.

Clarke told the subcommittee the proposed building would destroy the scenic beauty of the Arlington approach and would block further expansion of Arlington National Cemetery.

He proposed that the War Department Building at Twenty-first Street and Virginia Avenue, be enlarged and declared that Federal building expansion for the present, should be located within the "rectangle" west of Seventeenth Street between Constitution Avenue and E Street.

A. E. Demaray, associate director of the National Park Service, appeared for Delano and recommended that the building be made one-half as large as proposed.

Brig. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, construction quartermaster, testified for the War Department.

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the full Appropriations Committee, attended the session, but made no statement.

Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, subcommittee chairman, said the subcommittee will begin Monday "marking up" the eight billion dollar defense bill of which the building appropriation is a part. Final decision on the building will then be up to the full committee.

AN IDEA of where War Department workers live and how far they will have to travel to the proposed "dream" building across Arlington Memorial Bridge is given by this map. It shows the residential distribution of all Government employes, and officials say a similar calculation of residences of War Department workers alone varies less than 2 per cent. Surveys show that 18 per cent of War Department employes walk to work, 35 per cent ride in private cars and 47 per cent take streetcars or buses vate automobiles last.

Heavy industrial oils for defense factories were listed first, heating oils second and crude oil supplies third.

Transfer of tankers to British service has reduced the Atlantic seaboard supply by at least half, it was reported.

Last year, according to oil industry statistics, the 16 Eastern States and the District used 36 per cent of all the gasoline consumed in the United States—that is, of some 24 billion gallons used, the East burned about eight billion gallons.

Two large oil companies, it was learned, have started deliveries of crude oil to their Eastern refineries by motor tank trucks to supplement supplies being delivered by ocean tankers and railroad cars. It was reported, however, that the cost of delivery by rail and truck is running as high as 10 times ahead of ocean transportation.

In an unprecedented move to cooperate in the gas conservation program, 82 stock and mutual casualty insurance companies yesterday modified their rules to enable motorists to share their cars.

By easing liability regulations, the insurance concerns virtually made each of the country's 10 million passenger automobiles semi-taxis by permitting motorists to share their cars on a pro-rata cost basis.

Ickes announced that the modification would permit drivers to carry passengers for charge without paying an increased premium rate and without running a risk of having their policy contracts voided.

Persons driving to and from work have been urged by Ickes to pick up their neighbors.

Old rules governing the insurance companies' liability plan permitted automobile owners to carry passengers for pay only when their policies stipulated such provisions.

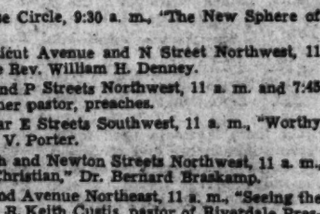
"IN HEAVENLY LOVE ABIDING"
- - - ANNA L. WARING - - -



In heavenly love abiding
No change my heart shall fear;
And safe in such confiding,
For nothing changes here.
The storm may roar without me,
My heart may low be laid;
But God is round about me,
And can I be dismayed?

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

This hymn—expressing confident hope and unfaltering trust—appeared in a small book of nineteen hymns entitled "Safety in God." Following so closely the spirit of the twenty-third psalm, it might well be a version of that ancient song of David.

Church to Hear 'Love's' Prayer, D.C.Man's Song

"Love's Prayer," a sacred song, based on The Lord's Prayer, and composed by Washingtonian Frank J. Davis, will be sung publicly for the first time on August 24 at 11 a. m. at St. Alban's Episcopal Church by barytone Thomas Leef. It also will be heard over Station WWDC at 9:30 p. m. that day.

DAVIS

The song was not written with The Lord's Prayer in mind, said Davis, resident of the 1000 block of Fifteenth Street Northwest, but the theme developed as he composed. He was nearly finished when he discovered the similarity between his son and the Prayer.

The words follow:

LOVE'S PRAYER.

Our Father who are in Heaven,
Hallowed be Thy Name.
Thou are all Life and Love, dear Lord,
Make me just the same.
Thy Kingdom come,
Thy Will be done,
On earth as 'tis in Heaven,
My Will I lose for yours I choose,
This is the only leaven.

Give us this day our daily bread,
For Body and for Soul,
Forgive us our trespasses,
That we may be made whole.
As we forgive each day we live,
Those who trespass against us,
And leave us not in temptation,
Lift us from every lust.

Deliver us from evil for Thee alone we trust,
In every action make us, Lord, Righteous, True and Just,
For Thine is the Kingdom withhe every one,
To make manifest ere Thy Will be done,
Then the Power and Glory forever,
With all Love, all Joy none can sever,
Will reign in each heart with Peace on the Earth,
Forever and Ever and Ever. A-men.

Reformation Youths to Take Soldiers on Tour and Picnic

By Robert Tate Allen
Post Church Editor

Reformation Lutheran youths will do their bit for the service boys today by taking them on a sightseeing tour of the Capitol, the Library of Congress, the Washington Cathedral and other places. The tour will be followed by a picnic in Rock Creek Park.

Forty men from Fort Meade and ten from the Army Recreational Camp at Arlington will be accommodated on the trip, which is being arranged through the Washington Federation of Churches, Reformation Church, the Recreational Camp and the Lutheran chaplain at Fort Meade.

The men will arrive at Reformation Church, 212 East Capitol Street, in Army trucks, leaving at 2 p. m. in private cars, each bearing three soldiers, one girl and a driver. The soldiers and church young hosts will be divided into three picnic groups so that no selectee will be overlooked.

Young people of Calvary Baptist Church, under the leadership of the Rev. Edwin Tuller, will arrange a servicemen's tour for next Saturday.

A group from National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, led by the Rev. Ivan H. Dugan, assistant pastor, will conduct vespers at Walter Reed Hospital tomorrow from 6 to 6:45 p. m., at the invitation of Chaplain Henry E. Westcott.

Dr. Worth M. Tippy, temporarily handling the Church Federation's coordinating work between churches and servicemen, announced yesterday that soldiers will be brought to the following churches tomorrow morning from the Army Recreational Camp:

Dr. Pruden Leads Tribute To Harwood Halls

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, last Sunday led a tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Harwood Hall upon completion of two years as ministers of music.

"The past two years have been busy and fruitful ones for them and their efforts have been crowned with unusual success," wrote Dr. Pruden in the weekly church bulletin.

In his remarks from the pulpit, he observed that the number of participants in choral work at First Church had jumped from 100 to 200 in two years. Altar flowers honored the Halls, who are now vacationing at his home in Oregon.

Work Must Go On

Acting Secretary of the Navy Bard has left no doubt that the Government will act promptly to take over the idle shipyards at Kearny, N. J., unless work on the war vessels under construction there is quickly resumed. The time has long since passed when the Government can tolerate extended delays in defense work because employers and employes are unable to adjust their differences. The national interest demands continuous production for defense and that national interest must be served. If this simple fact had been clearly recognized, the strike at Kearny would not have occurred.

Whatever may have been the original cause of the dispute between the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. and its employes, responsibility for the present waste of time and energy appears to fall directly upon the management. The strike was called only after the management declined to accept recommendations of the National Defense Mediation Board. Even though it twice rejected the proposed compromise on protection of its membership, the union later agreed to abide by the formula suggested by the board. A similar concession by the company is all that is needed to bring about resumption of work on enormous orders for ships vital to our national defense.

During World War I President Wilson did not hesitate to take over the plants of companies refusing to turn out defense equipment on reasonable terms. President Roosevelt took over the North American Aviation plant in California when the employes refused to return to work. In the case of the shipyards at Kearny his authority to act is without question, for the Selective Service Act makes specific provision for the seizure of plants when their owners refuse to cooperate in the defense program on reasonable terms. Certainly the reasonable terms in this case must be the recommendations of the Mediation Board. As a means of avoiding fatal delays in the production of defense materials, the recommendations of that agency must be upheld. It would be a dangerous precedent to allow either a company or a union to disregard the suggestions of the board to the detriment of our national security. The strange thing is that the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. does not recognize this fact and thus avoid a painful experience for itself and the Government.

Bengali Bard

It was perhaps a great pity that Rabindranath Tagore should have fitted so neatly into the American clubwoman's idea of how an Oriental mystic should appear, talk and behave. This misunderstanding of the poet had a great deal to do with the enormous vogue his books found here for a time after he received the Nobel award for literature in 1913. All sorts of esoteric meanings were read into his flowery and sometimes platitudinous verse. Thus, wholly against his intention, he made the way a little smoother here for the swarms of assorted swamis and yogis, who for a time in the early 1920's were almost as fashionable and flourishing as the psychoanalysts.

All this was both unfortunate and unjust, for it increased the difficulty of getting an unprejudiced reading for his poems, especially among those who had seen Tagore in the flesh and heard him read in his curious and delicate flute-like voice. Yet Tagore was not, and as far as we know never claimed to be, a mystical poet, even in the sense that Blake and Emily Bronte are called mystical poets. Critics, to be sure, have traced much of his thought to the Upanishads and to Sanscrit mythology, but in all probability these are reflected in his work in about the way that the thought of a European poet could be traced to Plato and Homer.

Tagore came of a distinguished and learned, but rather Europeanized Bengali family. He learned English at an early age and, even in his earlier work, Indian and European influences appear to be about equal. Many Bengalis consider him an English poet, rather than one of their own. In the latter part of his life he wrote almost entirely in English. His diligent study of English poetry seems to have been limited to forms that have been long since outmoded—the sort of poetry we should describe today as "old hat." This, doubtless, explains why so many English readers find him pretentious and trite.

Tagore believed that East and West do not represent antagonistic and irreconcilable attitudes of the human mind, but that they are complementary. And since Tagore's own thought and work represented a fusion of East and West, the fate of his poems and dramas at the hands of later generations of Indians and Englishmen may be the test of whether the age-old gulf between Asia and Europe can ever be bridged.

An Imperative Need

The Senate's vote authorizing the President to prolong the term of service of every man in the United States Army by another 18 months shows how cogent are the arguments in favor of such extension. Senators who voted for the extension undoubtedly did so reluctantly, since it was generally understood when the Selective Service Act was passed that the training period would not exceed a year. While charges of breaking faith with the selectees are not well founded in view of the emergency conditions now prevailing, such charges have been effectively "played up" by a minority who deny the existence of any emergency. Consequently, only the imperative need of building up a trained Army equal to the demands of modern mechanized warfare would have induced the majority to alter the terms of the contract with selectees and enlisted men. And that same need is coming to the fore with convincing force in the House debate.

The extended period of service does not mean, of course, that all selectees will be retained for 30 months or that the principle of selective training will be abandoned. Gen. Marshall simply wants to be able, he says, to release men "depending on where they happen to be located, depending on what the situation of their unit is, and, of course, depending on the development of the national situation." From the Army viewpoint objections may be raised to any definite limitation of the period selectees may be required to serve. However, the 30-month period seems to be a reasonable compromise between proposals for utterly inadequate extensions and an indefinite continuance of the term of service.

The Senate's approval of an amendment raising the pay of selectees and guardsmen held beyond the original 12 months' period will arouse mixed feelings. Obviously the present pay of selectees is meager compared with the wages many of them might be obtaining in civilian employment. But the value of the selectees' services cannot in any case be measured by market standards. The duty of the citizen to bear arms in defense of his country inevitably entails heavy sacrifices for able-bodied youth, although this country deals more generously with its armed forces than other nations—a fact of which we should be proud. But there are serious objections to incorporating in the service extension bill a provision for pay increases in what Senator Adams calls "a last-minute casual amendment, without reference to the War Department, without reference to the Treasury Department, without consideration by the Military Affairs Committee or the Committees on Appropriations." It is, however, extremely difficult to take a stand against the proposed increases in Army pay so long as Congress shows no inclination to economies in nondefense outlays for which there is so much less justification.

Saving Gas

Petroleum Coordinator Ickes confirms the fact that the gasoline sales curfew has produced no substantial over-all reduction in the use of motor fuel. In the majority of instances, apparently, gas sales are normal, with only a few filling stations reporting reduced purchases. The fact is that for the week ended August 1 gasoline sales throughout the East were up more than a million gallons over the previous week.

This was to be expected, for it has been perfectly apparent that the majority of motorists are loath to acknowledge that the oil shortage is as serious as has been represented. Nor will the moderately well-publicized efforts of the District Petroleum Conservation Committee begin to be effective until recognition of the shortage sinks into the public consciousness. It was hoped, of course, that the present curfew would accomplish this, but it obviously has not.

The next step, as Mr. Ickes suggests, is stringent rationing. A gas-rationing plan to serve as a potential model for the Eastern Seaboard has already been drawn up for possible use in September. It would limit gas consumption by pleasure cars to 15 gallons a week. The introduction of such a scheme would almost certainly arouse prolonged howls from motorists who are accustomed to using considerably more gas. But the necessity for conservation must be faced. In the circumstances, it might prove less of a hardship eventually if oil rationing were introduced gradually during this month rather than suddenly next month, as has been threatened. Intelligent action to get us through the emergency ought to be predicated on a hard-boiled appraisal of oil supplies and consumption prospects; not on the assumption that the public must be babied through the vacation weeks ahead or on the wistful hope of voluntary restriction.

Cleaning House

Encouraging evidence that one large labor organization is beginning to clean house comes from Buffalo where the United Automobile Workers are in convention. The convention refused to seat Harold Christoffel and nine associates claiming to represent the Allis-Chalmers local of Milwaukee. It was this union, it will be recalled, which conducted a 79-day strike seriously delaying defense production a few months ago. The Allis-Chalmers delegates, to be sure, were not excluded because of that strike. But the controversy revolved around the allegation of communistic leadership in the Milwaukee union and the use of Stalinistic methods to bring about the election of Mr. Christoffel and his followers. And Richard T. Frankensteen, U. A. W.-C. I. O. international board member, described the vote excluding the Allis-Chalmers men as a "good kick in the teeth for communism."

Apparently the convention acted on the basis of a complaint from members of the Milwaukee union to the effect that the Christoffel delegates had been nominated and elected at a meeting of 250 out of 4,000 union members. The nominations and elections took place within an hour, it was reported, despite the constitutional requirement that a week elapse between the selection of nominees and the final balloting. These are precisely the tactics used by subversive factions to capture and hold the leadership of unions against the will of the majority. Walter P. Reuther, representing the employes of General Motors, referred to the Allis-Chalmers election as "the worst kind of strong-arm political racketeering," and a majority of the delegates promptly responded to his appeal for democratic procedure in the management of unions. Only the unions themselves can free their organizations from the taint of communism and the grip of unscrupulous dictators. Every move in that direction is a stroke for democracy as well as for orderly collective bargaining.

Home Fronts

Now that Mr. Clark Griffith has conceded the 1941 pennant to the New York Yankees, that makes it unanimous. The remaining interest in the American League this year will be largely confined to the very moot question of whether Mr. Griffith's boys or the St. Louis Browns can throw away the larger number of ball games between now and October and thus establish themselves in what would certainly be the point of maximum safety in case of an air raid. In absent-mindedly winning three games in a row this week the Nationals seemed in a fair way to ruin their chances. But, judging from yesterday's score at Boston, the boys have pulled themselves together again. At this sort of thing, to be sure, neither the Nationals nor the Browns has exhibited anything like the finesse and industry of the Phillies in the other league. For the Phillies have put a layer of 16 full games between themselves and their nearest rivals, the Braves. Losing a ball game to the Phillies is such a difficult trick that it has been accomplished only 26 times this year.

The situation at the top of the National League, however, remains just such a nip-and-tuck contest as that at the bottom of the American League. Not long ago several learned and estimable seers announced that the Dodgers had utterly collapsed. There was a good deal of premature moralizing about the pernicious effects of prolonged spring training and divers other fallacies harbored by Messrs. Durocher and McPhail. But the Dodgers have shown remarkable recuperative powers, and the fact that the schedule immediately ahead of them comprises games with the Braves and the Phillies should be a great aid to convalescence. However, the most interesting National League club at the moment is neither the Cardinals nor the Dodgers, but Mr. Frisch's Pittsburgh Pirates, who have suddenly emerged from the slums of the league and moved into a respectable and really rather fashionable neighborhood—into the place, in fact, lately vacated by the whilom world's champions. The remarkable thing about the Pirates is that they don't seem to have very many admirable qualities besides curious capacity for winning plenty of ball games. But, of course, they'll bear watching for that very reason.

INDIAN SUMMER HOUR

With nothing but empty talk to share,
Slow words mumbled and scarcely heard
These old men sit in the windy Square;
The sap of life now leaves them stirred
Less than a cloud by a wheeling bird;
Their spring is past, but they do not care.

It takes but little enough to keep
Life in a body bent and spare:
The wine of talk, the bread of sleep,
Age to the old is sweet and fair.
The boy forgotten, the young man lost,
These oldsters gossip, unaware
That the wind for them is edged with frost,
Their sun burnt low in the frosty air. . . .

Owning Dogs

May I suggest to your recent complainant of dogs that he does not live in the right neighborhood. In some sections of Washington the dog appears almost extinct—if anything extinct can appear! According to a former so-called census there was an estimated 40 million dogs in the United States, only one-third the number of cats. Between the auto peril, the muzzle and the dog-catcher, the number is unquestionably diminishing.

CLARA LOUISE JOHN.
Washington, Aug. 7.

In reply to Raymond Newman about owning a dog, I would like to bring to his attention that human beings also whoop it up and bark in the wee small hours of the morning when they have their parties.

Let me bring to your attention, Mr. Newman, some of the many fine deeds dogs have done. Only last week I read in the paper where a father swam out in the water to rescue his little daughter who was drowning and due to an undertow, he lost his life. But their family dog saved the life of the little girl. Also eight years ago my own pet, a fine specimen of a police dog, saved my little niece's life when their home caught fire. The dog was burned very severely himself but he dragged the child out of her burning bed and she is today scarred for life, but still living and romping around and playing, all because of a faithful and courageous dog.

Also let us not forget the wonderful work the Seeing-Eye dogs are doing in giving the helpless so much pleasure.

DOUGLAS V. DUNLAP.
Washington, Aug. 7.

One must show a dog the respect he deserves, because his intelligence is not that of a lowly creature but that of a thinking, understandable nature.

As he grows up from puppyhood he becomes attached to you and his devotion for you would go beyond this life itself. Dogs have been known to give up their lives in the defense and protection of their masters and render the utmost protection to their owners' family, children and property as well.

Can you show me a better example of intelligence, love, loyalty and compatability than that of a Seeing-Eye dog or a Red Cross dog. Even your house pets render you some service, even if only the love and affection they bestow you.

PVT. WILLIAM R. GRIMES.

Traffic Coordination

I wish to suggest a treatment for one of our most annoying and complicated civic problems. That is: traffic congestion and automobile accidents.

President Roosevelt is about to appoint a coordinator for air traffic. In proportion as there are more automobiles than airplanes, I feel that a department to coordinate auto traffic should be formed.

A number of Government departments that are not connected officially but are doing related work, should be reorganized into a definite department to coordinate traffic safety rules and highway planning.

As you well know, 34,000 persons were killed by autos and trucks last year. The toll will be higher this year. The loss due to injuries and property damage runs into millions of dollars. Traffic congestion is expensive and annoying too, yet there has been very little concerted action to remedy it.

The Federal Department of Education could cooperate very effectively too, in a program of driver instruction.

Surely there is ample need for conserving human life and coordinating traffic safety practices on a Nation-wide basis.

ROBERT A. ROCKWELL.

Regarding Extension

One of the most important if not the most important bill to come before Congress in some time is that of extending indefinitely the time of service of Army personnel. The Chief of Staff and the President both urge its passage because the national security is threatened and disruption of the Army at this time might be disastrous; that the emergency is greater today than it was a year ago. This being true there is no grounds for debate. The issue is neither political nor that of good faith. The draftees were informed when called into service that there might be an emergency arising that would necessitate longer service. The Administration says the emergency is present; the men are not properly trained; the Army must be strengthened, not be disrupted through discharge of trainees at end of year; that the responsibility is that of Congress.

It is reported that the isolationists intend to fight the bill. To be consistent they should speed its passage because a strong America they say will insure against attack by foreign foe, and they want peace. It also is reported that Representatives are afraid to support the bill, fearing defeat at the next election, but this cannot be true because there are many times more voters in America than there are in the Army. Besides, they must know that if they fear to do their duty in this their battle America will send braver men to Congress in 1942. There cannot be that much political stupidity in the halls of Congress, whose members are loyal, brave, honorable men, straw votes to the contrary notwithstanding. My faith is in this Congress. War must be kept as far as possible from America.

Gropper Cartoons

Let me tell you that it was a good idea to publish the caricatures of our Senators and Congressmen, drawn by that excellent cartoonist, William Gropper. He is a keen-eyed artist whose satire and good humor are valuable qualities that many other cartoonists lack. The Post did us a real favor and gave us a real treat by printing these three drawings by Gropper in the photo section of The Sunday Post of August 2.

U. S. Police Salary Increase

In The Post of August 7 appears a letter from G. Hartman Reed, in which he objects to salary increases for "United States Special Police" as contemplated by a bill now pending in Congress. Mr. Reed's letter obviously was written with prejudice and his facts are so definitely at variance with the true situation, that it is deemed advisable to reply to his dissertation.

It is true that under the present CU-3 ratings which are allocated for guards, they may receive from $1,200 to $1,500 per annum. In theory this setup may appear adequately to reimburse them for their services. In practice, however, it does not operate so to reimburse them, essentially for the reason that Congress does not appropriate sufficient funds to meet the contingency of increases in cases of merit. In the group to which I am assigned, there is a total of 113 guards (privates). Of this number, 31 receive salaries in excess of $1,200 per annum, but none greater than $1,320, the majority being at $1,260. Most of these men, with the exception of a very small number, have families consisting of three or four children, who must be fed, clothed, housed, schooled, and otherwise prepared to take their places among our citizenry.

With the high cost of living in Washington, which is steadily increasing, it requires but little analysis to discover that it is wholly inadequate to cover the need. Families must go hungry, unclothed, and they must doom themselves to the meager existence of basement and tenement dwellings. With these handicaps, one does not need to stretch his imagination to predict the natural consequences. Children cannot be raised under such conditions and blossom into useful and well equipped citizens. Our labor organizations throughout the country have attempted to correct deficiencies existing in their labor ranks, which are similar to those pertaining to the guard force, and that is what Congress apparently is endeavoring to do for the guards in the bill now before it—make it possible for them to live decently and according to the standards of the average American citizen.

I cannot justify the statement that 95 per cent of all guards receive additional compensation from the Government in the form of pensions. The statement is wholly inaccurate and evidently made without any semblance of thoroughness. It is true that a small number of guards do receive additional compensation, ranging from less than $10 a month to full retirement pay. In this group, two receive retirement pay; a small number of others receive disability pay for injuries suffered in line of duty—small recompense for the sacrifices they have had to make. But, the majority, better than 70 per cent, receive only their salaries as guards and it is these salaries which must support them and their families. I understand that some years ago the guard force was composed largely of disabled and retired soldiers and sailors. This situation no longer exists.

Naturally, with the small pay and the hardships incident to the life of a Public Buildings Administration Guard, there is no attraction, and in spite of the fact that 2,497 passed a recent Civil Service examination, according to the press, eligibles are reluctant to come to Washington and struggle through on starvation fare. Fire and Police Departments, which have greater attraction in the way of starting salaries, supposedly get the cream of the quality. The duties of United States Special Police are not greatly dissimilar to those of the Fire and Police Departments. They are trained and required to extinguish fires; they are required to protect life and property, to make arrests, and otherwise maintain law and order in Government buildings. If, then, as Mr. Reed says, the requirements of the guard's job are not in consonance with the high salary proposed by Congress, then it logically follows that the Metropolitan Fire and Police Departments are similarly being paid in excess of their value to the community.

Waiting In Line

It occurred to us while waiting in line the other day that waiting in line is the oldest form of democracy—and the weakest. No sooner did primitive men band together—no sooner did a group of people want something at the same time than the choice between ruthlessness and democracy became clear.

When man became articulate, great minds conceived slogans to persuade the people of the justice of waiting in line. All things come to him who waits, and later, first come, first served. Perfectly straightforward, you see.

But we submit that waiting in line is the weakest of democracy's building blocks—shot through with injustice and teeming with the termites of revolution.

Let us select two great institutions where waiting in line is an established practice—the railway station and the bank. We will place ourselves at the end of a line at Union Station. At first the line will move snappily enough. "Baltimore," "Philadelphia," "Richmond," come the orders for tickets. And the clerk whips out little pieces of cardboard from a great bank of wooden slots.

Now comes the man in front of us. "Denver!" he declares in a hearty voice. There is little support in mathematics for this kind of happening, but like the computed arrival of Halley's comet, it seldom fails.

The clerk is a changed man. No longer is his job picayune. Here is opportunity for self-expression.

The little wooden slots are forgotten. From an obscure drawer that sticks, the clerk pulls a formidable strip of printed forms. It requires the entire stretch of the clerk's arm to remove this strip from the drawer and the thing is done with some aplomb.

With the top of this strip before him on the desk, and the opposite end trailing into the gloom of the inner ticket office, our clerk begins an exquisite maze of functions. There are vast numbers of stamps to be selected from lofty tiers, and like a master organist our clerk shifts his hands from place to place. The stamping business is complicated by frequent reference to a dry ink pad and interspersed with hasty and illegible bits of writing which must be carefully blotted.

No impatient shuffling about by other persons in this microcosm of so-called democracy—this ticket line—is allowed to hasten or interrupt the preparation of the ticket for Denver. Trains come and go and the sun's rays begin to slant, but the ticket for Denver flows on like a river to the sea.

When our turn comes, we bite off the word "Baltimore" like a wad of black tobacco and the petty retail business begins again.

Here, by the presence of a single person, in a line of 20, is the whole principle of democracy withered, and its calm and gentle face spat upon.

The opportunities for such sabotage of principle are not limited. They are no where richer than in a bank. Let us turn to a little group of people waiting beside a bronze door for the bank to open. It is late morning, and other folk have been at work for an hour or more.

Finally, a tiny shutter on a hole in the mighty door slips open exposing a yellow distrustful eye. In a flash it is gone. There is a pregnant pause, the whir of powerful machinery, and the towering bronze panel inches back. Through this gateway of the gods the little folk plunge like souls leaving purgatory.

They are confronted now with a waist-high wall of gleaming marble topped by a frieze of golden bars. Behind this wailing wall are little cells equipped with adding machines and drawers filled with money. The gentlemen in these cells are somewhat above our ticket clerk, and there is no agreement among them as to when they shall start work.

As our little group of depositors and withdrawers streaks toward this marble redoubt, the first cell is bleak and barren of life. An onyx sign, lettered in golden English script, refers them to the next window. Here the teller is indeed ready, and the little people lose their agitation and settle into a line.

We are at the end of this line, but there is something in this great temple which inspires patience. Peace and orderliness reign and the man in front of us is about to depart.

Behind us new arrivals have kept the line at its original length, and we feel that pleasant warmth of receiving just reward.

Suddenly come sounds from the next window. They are the vague, suspicious sounds that in the dead of night awake the thought of burglars. Nothing tangible, nothing that gives the eardrum an honest thump. You just suspect something is going on in that next cell. There is. A teller has appeared. He does not call out. There is no hearty summons to "come and get it." His mere appearance has the effect of a stone cast into a mirrored lake. The line behind us breaks, and those in the very rear are the first to reach the newly opened window.

Our taste of rewarded patience turns to ashes.

Again democracy has been raped, and helpless, we offer prayers for a paradise beyond the stars where justice is reality and the only line is a straight one leading from this best of all possible worlds.

Umbrella Mike Blocks War Job

HERE is another certified crook whom you may file away in your rogues' gallery of extortioners, thieves, brothelkeepers and traitors who enjoy the protection of the Wagner Act and a Supreme Court decision in their racketeering and traitorism, in this hour of national peril.

PEGLER

Our subject is Michael Joseph Boyle, of Chicago, business agent and boss for these last 25 years of Local 134 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of the A. F. of L. He is a notorious union racketeer and is known as Umbrella Mike because legend has it that he used to hang his umbrella on the bar of Johnson's saloon on W. Madison Street, as a place of deposit for graft from building contractors who were in the market for strike insurance.

But when I say that "legend has it" I do not offer you hearsay. The legend is supported by the record of the Federal Courts in Chicago wherein the Court of Appeals, upholding a sentence of one year in jail and $5,000 fine for violation of the Anti-Trust Law, wrote, "It requires no stretch of the imagination to conceive of a jury taking a prejudice against a party who is thus pictured in the role of a blackmailer, a highwayman, a betrayer of labor and a leech on commerce." The Court of Appeals was referring to testimony in the lower court which proved that Umbrella Mike "on various occasions made builders pay him considerable sums under threat of strike or boycott."

"FOR EXAMPLE," the Court of Appeals said, reviewing the case, "one witness testified that he paid Boyle $500 to get a certain switchboard installed; another, that Boyle extracted from him $3,000 in order that he might install a certain switchboard; still another, that Boyle required a church to pay a $200 penalty for the installation of certain electrical apparatus. Still another testified that Boyle exacted payment of $20,000 in return for a promise of immunity from strikes at a time when there was no difficulty between the builder and his employes. Plaintiffs contend that this evidence was highly prejudicial to their cause."

It was at this point that the Court of Appeals, with dry sarcasm, remarked that it was not surprising that a jury should conceive a prejudice against Mike Boyle, adding that the $20,000 item of graft was paid with the understanding on the part of the builder that he could proceed without strikes or molestation.

THE Court of Appeals found the picture of a blackmailer, a highwayman, a betrayer of labor and leech on commerce to be an authentic likeness of Michael J. Boyle, and upheld the lower court in an attempt to assure to the people of the United States the pathetic measure of justice which had been dealt them by the judge who passed the paltry sentence of one year and $5,000 on a man whose proven graft had been $23,500, and this amount only a legally established sample of the whole.

But the people and justice were to be cheated of a portion of even that token retribution, for in May, 1920, after the case had dragged for five years and after Umbrella Mike had served five months in the Chicago Bridewell, the crooked politicians' country club, President Woodrow Wilson commuted the jail term and Mike was released on the plea of Samuel Gompers, then President of the A. F. of L.

THIS CROOK or "blackmailer, highwayman, betrayer of labor and leech of commerce," as the Court of Appeals described him, has never been embarrassed by this or the many other little misadventures which have enlivened his career as a labor faker under license from the pious American Federation of Labor. He is still as mighty in Chicago as his colleague, Harry Van Arsdale of the same union, is in New York, where Van Arsdale recently jerked the electricians off all construction jobs in his large jurisdiction, including naval construction for war at the yard in Brooklyn, and blacked out Broadway as an intimation of his menacing power over the biggest city in the Nation, merely because one employer refused to violate the law at his command.

And, like Van Arsdale in New York, Boyle in Chicago has recently been blockading an important war job by refusing to permit the installation of certain lighting fixtures in the Buick Aviation Engine Plant, an urgent projected A-1-C, U. S. Air Corps, because the fixtures were made by C. I. O. labor. They were made under legal conditions, but the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. unions, individually, reserve for themselves a power to flout the law and it appears that there is nothing that the American people can do about it.

Non-German Stooges Assist Nazi Fifth Column

(This is the fourth of a series of five articles depicting in documented detail the strangle hold the Nazis have obtained on Japan. The author, an authority on the Far East, was until recently managing editor of Japan News-Week, American weekly published in Tokyo, and on the faculty of the Tokyo University of Commerce.)

As in other countries, the Nazi Fifth Column in Japan relies heavily upon non-German stooges and go-betweens.

First of all, there are the Japanese Quislings, contact men for the German Embassy like Tadao Murata, former secretary of Seigo Nakano who heads the notorious Tohokai, Japan's Fascist Party, and clumsy stooges like one Fujihira who day and night haunts the lobby of the Imperial Hotel eavesdropping on foreigners.

Nationals from occupied territories in Europe, German vassal states and doubtful neutrals like Spain and Sweden provide a bizarre assortment of stool pigeons and informers, some posing as anti-Nazi, who frequent such places as hotel lobbies, summer resorts, foreign-style restaurants and bars, and the Tokyo and American clubs.

Then there are the sordid types, the broken-down renegades, beachcombers and bar-flies of Tokyo's foreign community, who get their hand-outs from the German Embassy.

ⵔⵔ

THE more romantic side is provided by White Russian filles de joie imported from Shanghai and Tientsin, glamorous ladies from Central Europe and the Balkans, slightly tarnished butterflies who flit mysteriously about the Far East with ample funds, sleek Chinese bar girls and demure Japanese cafe waitresses.

Scores of ultra-nationalistic Asiatics act as henchmen, go-betweens and agents provocateurs for the Nazi Fifth Column: Arabs, Afghans and Indian Nationalists. Indian revolutionaries in German pay have been particularly active in fomenting anti-British agitations.

The Great Mogul of these Indian collaborators is Rash Behari Bose, head of the India Independence League in Japan, a naturalized Japanese. He fled to Japan in 1915 after attempting a number of revolutionary plots and hurling a bomb at and severely injuring Lord Hardinge, then Viceroy of India. The Indian authorities offered a 12,000 rupee reward for his arrest and requested his extradition. The Japanese government of Premier Shigenobu Okuma endeavored to arrange for his deportation, but were powerless to do so. Bose was protected by Mitsuru Toyama and the Black Dragon Society, and has remained in Japan ever since. Under his name in the Japanese "Who's Who," this terrorist notes with pride that he bombed Lord Hardinge and has been "active in Japan for Indian Independence, Asiatic renaissance and world peace based on justice and love."

IN still other ways, in addition to the use of non-Germans, the story of Nazi propaganda methods in Japan follows the pattern employed by German Fifth Columns in other countries. Its aims in Japan, however, are specialized, and influenced by Japan's present position in the Pacific and the Japanese government's present obligations under the Tripartite Alliance.

Nazi propaganda objectives, therefore, are directed toward the achievement of two principal goals:

(1) The rightist revolution which will make Japan a totalitarian vassal of the Third Reich;

(2) The promotion of a Japanese-American war, by convincing Japan that southward expansion into the East Indies can be achieved without such a war.

The German Embassy in Tokyo, the fountain-head of this propaganda campaign, is assisted in this work by D. N. B. and Transocean, the two German news agencies which deal in editorial fabrications. Both have headquarters in Tokyo. In addition, there are no less than 150 German "press representatives" stationed in Japan, as against only six correspondents from the United States and about three from the British Empire. One of the principal tasks of the Nazi pressmen is to raise the right sort of questions for Official Spokesman Ko Ishii of the Cabinet Information Bureau during his regular press conferences and to head off too direct or embarrassing queries poised by other correspondents.

THE Japan-German Cultural Institute under Dr. Walther Donat, another important propaganda outlet and rumor channel, not only distributes Nazi literature and pamphlets, but also arranges private showings of German war films.

It also sends a veritable deluge of Nazi propaganda to the Japanese schools, especially the Kotogakko, or higher schools, where most of the 100-odd German teachers are now engaged. Besides sheer political pamphlets the German Embassy and Japan-German Cultural Institute make large gifts of Nazi-indorsed books, German textbooks for class use, and "cultural" films of such subjects as the Siegfried Line.

This activity, of course, receives not only the cooperation but the approval of the Japanese Education Ministry, which in turn is influenced by the Nazi-controlled Japanese Home Office. On the other hand, the Education Ministry, which has jurisdiction over all Japanese schools (public and private) makes short shrift of anything charged as British or American propaganda. The major overhauling administered the Protestant missionary schools and colleges last fall was in good part inspired by the charge that these foreign-controlled institutions were propaganda centers for Britain and the United States.

LOOK at any newsstand in Tokyo today. It is spattered with numerous pro-Axis pamphlets, works sponsored by patriotic societies or written by retired army officers (generally members of the powerful Meirinkai). Go into Maruzen's Book Store at Kyobashi, Tokyo, the largest retail bookshop in Japan. Almost half the foreign book section covering the second floor is given over to German publications, mostly rank Nazi propaganda enterprises.

It is by control of the Japanese press, however, that the Nazi Fifth Column in Japan has been most successful. This was made possible by working agreements with the home office censors and the Kempeitai, or military police. But to suppress unfavorable news is only half of this propaganda job. Of equal importance is to secure the publication of the right kind of news. This the Germans have achieved by a number of ways.

Through what amounted to outright bribes, the Nazis gained complete control of the Hochi and the Kokumin Shimbun, third-rate Tokyo dailies. Both have carried the editorial brunt of the Fifth Column's campaign in Japan. The Kokumin was reached in the fall of 1939 through its long-standing connections with the Japanese army.

IN the spring of 1938 the Hochi passed into the hands of a bankrupt political agitator, formerly president of the Japan-German Anti-Comintern Society, who was supplied with the necessary funds by Nazi Presseleiter Jacob Sahl.

By bribery, entertainment and astute go-betweens, the Fifth Column has approached other papers with varying degrees of success. For example, last fall Matsutaro Shoriki, head of the Yomiuri Shimbun and the most able and enterprising publisher in Japan, received an unexpected invitation from Gen. Ott for lunch at the German Embassy. After brandy and cigars, Ott led his guest to a private study where a huge map of Europe hung on the wall. With a pencil the Nazi general indicated plans of attack for 1941 which would bring Britain to her knees.

A FEW DAYS later one of Shoriki's editors was entertained at a swank Japanese restaurant by a secretary from the German Embassy and some of the so-called German "press representatives." Then came hot new tips by telephone from the German Embassy, followed by a steady stream of carefully prepared releases. Impressed by Ott's forceful personality, the brandy, the cigars and the war map, Shoriki allowed most of these propaganda capsules to find their way into the pages of the Yomiuri.

The German Fifth Column unsuccessfully attempted to buy out two American-owned papers in Tokyo. The Japan Advertiser and Japan News-Week. Three times the value of the latter publication, in United States dollars, was offered. But the American owner, who is a true friend of Japan, refused to negotiate with the Germans.

LAST FALL, however, The Japan Advertiser was sold to The Japan Times Publishing Co., controlled by the Japanese Foreign Office. Now known as the Japan Times and Advertiser, the former American daily has been fully geared to the Nazi Fifth Column, despite the efforts of its able publisher, Toshi Go, to keep it a first-rate newspaper.

Shortly after the change of ownership, a special stooge was appointed to the paper's staff. A worn-out official from the Japanese diplomatic service, his task is not to see that this Japanese-owned and edited paper does not publish material harmful to Japan, but to insure that all news, editorials and photographs have the proper pro-Axis flavor. And what a time the editorial staff had composing pro-Italian headlines for the articles on Italy's defeats in Albania and Libya last winter!

FINALLY, the Germans have exercised sweeping control over the release of foreign films in Japan. Again, this has been engineered through the home office censors and the Kempetai. Reel after reel of so-called German "cultural" and "documentary" films are shown in Japanese cinemas, all glorifications of the totalitarian state and blitzkrieg warfare.

No British cultural films have been released in Japan. Pro-Axis pictures favorable to the British war effort or illustrating the progress of the American rearmament program rarely reach the Japanese public. Through agile manipulation at the home office, the Nazis also succeeded last summer in securing the elimination of Paramount News, the only foreign product released as a complete picture.

Thereafter, only carefully edited and censored portions of American newsreels have been shown in Japan.

The Gallup Poll

Majority of Public Favor Old-Age Pensions For Neediest Cases Only, Survey Finds

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 8.—One of the fundamental ideas of the Townsend Plan is that old-age pensions should be paid to all citizens past 60 who will agree to quit work, if they have any, and not merely to the "neediest" old people.

Washington observers would not be surprised if some such proposal emerged eventually from Senator Downey's Senate committee investigating the pension issue. The California Senator is known as Dr. Townsend's principal spokesman in Congress.

Where does public opinion stand today on the question of universal pensions?

With Congress preparing to tussle with the old-age pension question again shortly, Nationwide studies by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicate the average American still believes pensions should be limited to those demonstrably in greatest need.

Reality vs. Ideal

But the survey shows that much of the average man's thinking about pensions reflects a mental struggle between the ideal and present reality. Thus, while the majority feel pensions should now be paid only to persons in greatest need, an equally large majority say they would be willing to lay aside a substantial percentage of their income over the coming years to make pensions, in effect, universal.

This, of course, is the long-time object of the Social Security Act, which calls for a rising scale of employe-employer contributions until 1949, when the worker and his boss will each be required to lay aside three cents for every dollar of the employe's wages under $3,000 a year.

How willingly the rank-and-file would make this 3 per cent contribution toward future pensions is indicated in the following question:

"Would you be willing to pay three cents out of every dollar of your income until you are 60 in order to get a pension from the Government of $50 a month after you are 60?"

The Institute put the question to men and women now under 60 years of age in all parts of the United States.

Would Be Willing	76%
Would Not Be Willing	18
Undecided	6

Townsend Plan

The survey shows that considerable misinformation still exists regarding the Townsend Plan, possibly because of tactical changes in recent years regarding the plan's objectives. Thus the survey found that whereas nearly 9 persons in every 10 had heard of the Townsend Plan, the average man with any notion of the sum at all thought it proposed pensions of $200 a month—as once stressed by some proponents of the plan.

Actually, Dr. Townsend proposes a tax which he believes would provide pensions of $50 a month "at the outset," with the hope of larger amounts later.

Voters were asked: "Do you know how much per month each person is supposed to receive under the Townsend Plan that is now being proposed to Congress?" In reply, 5 per cent said the plan was supposed to provide $50 a month or less, 7 per cent named a figure between $75 and $200, and 15 per cent mentioned $200. The great majority (73%) either had no impression about the figure or had not yet heard of the plan itself.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

When The President Returns

THE PRESIDENT will soon be compelled by events to do for the internal management of the war economy something like that which at long last he has recently done by means of the Wallace Economic Defense Board for external economic affairs. He has created a superior policy making committee of responsible officials under the leadership of the Vice President acting as his deputy. He cannot refrain much longer from setting up the same sort of organization to direct the production and distribution both of military supplies and civilian necessities.

LIPPMANN

Though much good work has been done and big things accomplished, it would be hard to find any one in Washington who does not believe that the present system of disconnected, overlapping and often conflicting departments and agencies, all reporting to the President, is wrong and in the long run bound to break down.

It is as if the President, as commander in chief, were trying to run the Navy without a supreme naval command by conferring with and issuing direct orders to the captain of each warship, as if he were trying to run the Army without Gen. Marshall and a general staff by means of direct orders to corps and division commanders. The complex and vital business of the American economy cannot be planned and directed by the President holding an unending series of conferences with the OPM and then with Mr. Henderson's OPACS and then with Secretary Morgenthau and then with Chairman Eccles and then with Admiral Land and then with Secretary Ickes and so on and so on. This does not produce a policy. This does not produce prompt decisions. It produces nervous breakdowns and will produce an industrial breakdown and an uncontrollable inflation.

THE EVENTS which will compel the President to set up a workable organization are, one, that the tax bill and the price control bill are going to be delayed, snarled up and chewed to pieces in Congress, and, two, that there are about to develop shortages so acute and critical that the furore about silk stockings and about gasoline in the East will seem trifling. The combined effect of real shortages, utterly inadequate powers and instruments of control, and the overlapping and conflicting policies of OPM and OPACS, will have such effects both on the defense program and upon civilian life that there will be an overwhelming demand for an organization with authority to handle the situation.

The President will be pushed into doing what with foresight and wisdom and political courage would have been done some months ago. We have a silk problem today which requires emergency treatment for no other reason than that it has been nobody's business to prepare for the day when silk ceased to come from Japan. Yet everybody knew, though no one had the authority and the responsibility to do something about it, that a severance of trade with Japan was not only possible but probable.

UNDER a proper organization of the war effort, the superior economic board would have formulated a silk policy, and its presiding officer—the Administrator as he is called in the official but discarded mobilization plan—would have had authority to order the proper agencies to carry out the policy. But as things are now organized, how are OPM and OPACS, the RFC and the Maritime Commission, to know when and whether and how events abroad will shut off silk, or rubber, or some other necessary material? They can read the papers, can have lunch with some one in the State Department and they can ask some one about Mr. Hopkins and they can confer with the President.

And when they have done all that, how do Mr. Stettinius and Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Henderson, Mr. Jesse Jones who controls the money, and Admiral Land who controls the ships, arrive at a policy which all of them have to execute? The answer is they do not arrive at a policy and no policy is executed.

SINCE there is no superior policy-making body and no central executive authority to get policy executed, Congress is asked to pass tax bills and price control bills and property requisitioning bills as if they were so many disconnected titbits. These measures reach Congress from some one department or some one subordinate official. In Congress they are pulled apart and put together without anyone's believing or being able to say that they are related to any central basic national policy. They are presented to Congress with casual comments from the President and without the prestige and authority which they would have if they had been considered and decided upon by a supreme war policies committee.

Naturally every politician feels free to play politics with these measures and any special interest feels free to lobby. In playing politics they are merely disregarding Mr. Leon Henderson and who in their eyes is Mr. Leon Henderson as compared with the Congress of the United States? Dealing with measures that are timidly conceived, irresolutely offered, formulated piece-meal and backed by no convincing decision of the men responsible for defense, Congressmen have no reason to feel that they must put the national interest ahead of their political interests. Why should they, for example, regard Mr. Leon Henderson as the guardian of the national interests when they know quite well that nobody at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue knows where Mr. Henderson's authority begins or ends?

THUS for lack of a sound organization to direct the war effort, the necessary legislative powers are not formulated, are not properly presented to Congress, and are not, therefore, made available. The system has worked thus far only because industry was taking up the slack of the depression and tooling up for mass production. Now that production in quantity has begun, critical shortages are developing, and these shortages have to be managed firmly and comprehensively or they will stall the defense program, dislocate industry, and bring on inflation.

Navy Recruits Find Hammock Sleeping an Art

By John O'Reilly

Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Aug. 8.—The first three weeks of recruit training are the hardest of a man's naval career. When recruits arrive here they must remain in Camp Barry, the detention unit, for three weeks to make sure that no communicable diseases contracted outside develop at the station. Everything about them is new and strange. Their only view of the outside world is through an iron fence and they have to learn a hundred new things each day.

The recruit has to learn when to salute and when not to salute. He must learn he can smoke in the barracks only when the smoking lamp is burning. He may be disappointed when he finds himself detailed to stand guard over the daily wash. He may think it silly to have to march up and down in front of a bunch of clothes hanging out to dry, but it is part of his training. He has to get used to living with strangers, for usually a recruit doesn't know any of the others in his company.

The recruit is not permitted to talk to anybody through the fence surrounding Camp Barry. He is frequently getting shots in the arm or having some sort of medical examination. His girl can't come to see him during these three weeks. He has to learn to wear his hat squarely on his head about one inch above his eyebrows. He learns he is supposed to drink four glasses of water when he gets up each morning. In fact, there seems to be no end to the things he has to learn.

Speculate About "Paradise"

During these three weeks the recruits talk among themselves about a place they all call "Paradise." This word is heard frequently and it turns out that Paradise is the main station, where the recruits go after their three weeks of detention. They have very little idea what it will be like but they expect that it must be paradise when compared to Camp Barry. But even in the midst of their apprehension the recruits are always laughing at the mistakes of their fellows and stern, old chief petty officers try to keep their faces straight.

This correspondent walked into one of the barracks in Camp Barry and sat down with some recruits at a table. They were learning to roll their trousers into a tight roll to fit into their sea bag. They had been in the Navy for two whole days. They had gotten Navy haircuts, had their first shots in the arm and physical examinations and had drawn their clothing. The first night they had slept on mattresses spread on the floor, or deck as they call it in the Navy. The next night they were initiated into the art of sleeping in a hammock and it seemed to have made a deep impression on them.

In the barracks are iron pipes 4 feet above the floor and supported by iron uprights. The recruits sling their hammocks between these pipes. They receive no instructions on hammock sleeping. Each man has to learn the art himself.

"You could hear us falling out one after another," said Clair Bresler, of St. Louis, Mo. "They were dropping like flies."

Haircut in 42 Seconds

"Do you know," said Robert Bellesbach, of Eau Claire, Wis., in awed tones, "it takes 42 seconds to get a haircut in the Navy."

"The record is 32 seconds," said Billy Stringer.

"Gosh, you ought to have seen the beans we had for breakfast this morning," put in Clair Bresler. "And coffee? We had a mug that holds a pint, I bet."

Then the talk swung back to the hammocks which seemed to present the most pressing problem at the time. The recruits explained that they have to pull their hammocks so tight that they are as flat as a board and don't sag in the middle like civilian hammocks. This makes them turn much easier. When they turn there is no preliminary warning and the recruit sails out on the floor, or deck.

In answer to questions as to why they had joined the Navy, most of those in the group said they had planned to join for a long time. Henry Freiburger, of Verona, Mo., an Ozark farm boy, said he had become tired of farm work.

Today's News Sidelight

Lake Peipus Is 60-Mile Buffer Defending Leningrad

The German pincers against Leningrad must operate around two of Russia's largest lakes, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"Ladoga, the largest lake in Europe, adjoins the northern or Finnish sector of the German drive on Leningrad," says the bulletin, "while the southern half of the pincers must move around the less familiar Lake Peipus.

Defended City's Beginnings

"The two lakes have served to protect Leningrad's site since before the city was built. The swampy lowlands between the lakes were recognized as a strategic location by Peter the Great. But before he began in 1702 to conjure a city out of the marshes, he launched small lake navies on Peipus and Ladoga to guard his project from hostile Swedes. A minor naval battle on Lake Peipus resulted in Swedish defeat. Then the Russians finished building their miracle city in five hectic months of grim and pestilence-ridden peace, at the estimated cost of the lives of 100,000 workmen. They named it St. Petersburg.

"The Russo-Finnish war in the winter of 1939 brought Lake Ladoga, as large as Lake Ontario, into the news. But Lake Peipus, a 60-mile-long obstacle to any approach to Leningrad from the southwest, is not so well known. After Ladoga and Onega, it ranks as European Russia's third largest lake.

"Straddling the frontier between Estonia and Russia before the absorption of the former small Baltic republic into the U. S. S. R. last year, Peipus was one of the few natural boundary markers on Russia's 2,000-mile-long western border. The Russian name for the lake is Chudskoe, after the Chuds who formerly inhabited the region. Estonians call it Peipsi, after the old witch Peipa, who figures in their folk tale of the lake's origin.

Glacier Gouged Out Site

"Geographers find a less bewitched explanation of the beginning of Lake Peipus in the vast Ice Age glacier that once covered the whole Baltic area. A lobe of the glacier scoured out the Peipus hollow, which filled with fresh water as the ice receded. Reminders of more frigid times are the ice-loving seals which still live in the lake's waters.

"Green marsh and yellow sand alternate around the shores of Peipus, backed by flat-topped, wooded hills. Between the hillside patches of fir or pine stand birch copses and occasional rowan trees bright with red berries, or small apple orchards. Villages of fisher-folk dot the Russian side of the lake, where the fishing grounds are richest. Small dairy farms lie along the Estonian shores.

"Shipping from the Baltic through Lake Peipus made an important trading city of Pskov, on the lake's southern tributary, Velikaya, as early as the fourteenth century. Now most of the shipping is local in nature, consisting largely of timber carried down Russian rivers and across the lake to Estonian ports in picturesque shallow lake boats with large square-rigged white sails.

"Among the inhabitants of the lake's shores are the Setus, a blue-eyed Estonian people who lacked formal education until the twentieth century, but cherished a rich folk literature by word of mouth."

Even King Passively Resists Nazis, Belgian Fliers Say

In the last of a series of interviews about their thrilling escape to England from Nazi-occupied territory in a stolen plane, two Belgian fliers reveals the plight of their native land under Nazi rule. They are using the pseudonyms of "Jean Qevers" and "Jacques Dubois" for the duration of the war to protect their relatives still living in Belgium from reprisals.

By Merrill Mueller

International News Service

London, Aug. 8.—"King Leopold of the Belgians, and the Queen Mother Elizabeth, are still virtual prisoners under elite guard at the royal chateau outside Brussels but both are carrying on a strong passive resistance campaign against the Germans."

The two pilots of the Belgian air force, now members of the Free Belgian squadrons of the R. A. F., who recently escaped from Antwerp in a stolen plane after hair-raising experiences, told me about the Belgian royal family's position today in discussing the plight of Belgium.

This is the picture of Belgium today, as the two fliers, "Jean Qevers" and "Jacques Dubois," described present conditions there:

"Business and traffic are at a standstill—only German military traffic can be found for they have all the petrol. What little is left is strictly rationed for those who work for the Germans.

"A few factories in Belgium work for the Germans but all R. A. F. bombing raids directed anywhere against the Germans in Belgium are wildly welcomed by the populace, many of whom have suffered for trying to help guide the English pilots.

"The reaction of the population to Leopold is fair—they believe he meant well in surrendering and preventing more bloodshed, and the word that he is participating in the passive resistance campaign has spread throughout the country and aided the cause.

"But because of the economic and political chaos predominant it is hard to judge what his position will be when Belgium is liberated. The people will be loyal, yes, but there may be some changes in royal powers. The royal children are safe in a private school with governesses, the last we had heard.

"Cigarettes, cigars, clothes, food, metals, petrol, practically everything of value or personal comfort is tightly rationed—much more so than here in England. Meat is seldom seen but food queues have for the most part been controlled and we know of no food riots although there have been rumors of such.

"There have been some assassinations of German guards and political officers here and there but nothing on a large or organized scale. The new "V" for Victory drive may improve the situation!" Both boys grinned slyly.

"Nazification of the country under the Rexists (Fascists) has failed completely. Belgium is loyal to her democratic principles and looks to the free government in London to bring her eventual liberation.

"There are, however, small political groups, particularly Fascist sympathizers like the Rexists, who aid the Germans. And the Germans use the 'roving labor' system (sending willing workers anywhere for Reich war production). As a prize to be gained for helping them, families of such workers receive increased rations and more freedom but the workers themselves find only long hours, poor food and strict control awaiting them in the Nazi war effort schemes.

"The morale of the German troops is excellent and their equipment of very high grade and in abundant quantities. They have recently been constructing new fortifications along the coasts—now we know why: to protect their backs while they are busy in the east. But they still have large numbers of reservist forces in the 'closed' areas near the coasts.

Penalties For Failure

"Many Belgians wish to escape and fight; many more wish to do sabotage work, but all are closely watched and all know what terrible penalties await the families of those who are caught.

"The spirit of the country is as good as can be expected under trying conditions. But when the time comes, Belgians will rise and avenge the rape of their country!"

"Perhaps," Jacques said, "we could steal a bomber this time and help the R. A. F. bomb Berlin."

I saw the look in his eyes, and the quick approval of the suggestion from Jean.

"I wouldn't try it!" I replied, "but if you do, take me along."

Luxembourg Royalty Receives at Legation

By Carolyn Bell

Looking every inch a Duchess, the poised and lovely ruler of Luxembourg greeted several hundred guests at a reception yesterday afternoon at the legation. Later she made a brief, but hopeful, radio address which will be heard in Nazi-dominated Luxembourg via London.

One look yesterday at the crowded rooms of the spacious legation on Massachusetts Avenue—and one could hardly realize it was 90 degrees in the shade and that Washington has hit rock-bottom—socially. Out in full force were diplomats, officials and even a sprinkling of "cave dwellers" could be found. A midsummer party—and a European one at that—is indeed an occasion.

A sort of semicircular receiving line was arranged in the salon upstairs. The Grand Duchess Charlotte and the Prince of Luxembourg were introduced by the dapper Minister, Hugues Le Gallais. Her Royal Highness was simply dressed in a blue and white printed frock, with pearl-drop earrings matching her necklace. Her only lapse into frivolity was a huge orchid pinned at the neckline. The handsome prince had a gardenia tucked in his lapel. Next in line was the guest of honor, the United States Charge d'Affaires of Luxembourg, George Platt Waller. He too had a creamy gardenia as a boutonniere.

Mr. Waller also made a radio speech yesterday afternoon addressed principally to the grand duchess in the form of a message from her people. Mr. Waller returned from Luxembourg last week. The main speech of the afternoon, however, was given by Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle. In soft, but expressive tones, Mr. Berle told the assembled—as well as radio—listeners of America's wish to help in the desperate European situation.

Luxembourg's Prime Minister in Receiving Line

But to return to the receiving line. Mme. Le Gallais wore a cluster of sweetheart roses on her pink and black printed frock. Mme. Bech, wife of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, who is now in London, was prettily turned out in a pink and white ensemble. The Prime Minister of Luxembourg, Pierre Dupong, was in the line as was the Minister of Justice, Victor Bodson.

An early arrival was towering Lord Halifax, who conversed with first one diplomat and then another. The Ambassador from Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera reported that they will remain in Washington the entire summer—which is definitely a departure from their usual routine. Causing a flurry of comments was the arrival of Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky. She was smartly attired in a bright printed frock and a towering turban.

After greeting the hosts and guests of honor upstairs, the guests wandered downstairs to a lavish arrangement of refreshments. A bar—where everything from mint juleps to cocktails could be ordered—was doing a rushing business. Two huge silver bowls, one with iced coffee and the other filled with orange juice, were also popular. Thin sandwiches, cakes and cookies completed the refreshments. The long table was centered with red and white rubrum lilies.

Mrs. Cordell Hull Guest at Party

Making her first appearance since she and the Secretary of State returned from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., was Mrs. Cordell Hull. Looking rested and well, she was smartly turned out in a black sheer frock and white sailor. The Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George Pettengill made an early appearance. Mrs. Pettengill wore a whimsical little pink hat, swathed in veiling, perched atop her snow-white hair.

The Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Aurelio F. Concheso, was accompanied by the son-in-law and daughter of the Minsiter of Foreign Affairs of Cuba, Senor and Senora de Arango. The attractive couple will leave in several days for New York and will sail for their homeland. Tall and extremely pretty, Senora de Arango wore a vivid printed frock and wide-brimmed hat trimmed in material matching her dress.

The Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann arrived and were glimpsed chatting in the tapestry hung salon with a group. Mme. Bruggmann wore a cool looking green and white printed frock and a white turban. The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels were in the throng, she wearing a dark sheer, printed in white. The Belgian Ambassador and Countess Van der Straten Ponthoz were there as was the Minister from Norway, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Minister from South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, and the Minister from the Netherlands, Dr. Alexander Loudoun.

GLIMPSED HERE AND THERE: Mrs. Jesse Jones, in a smart cocoa print shantung frock, using a multicolored fan . . . Mrs. Truxtun Beale in lavendar linens chatting with Adolf Berle . . . The Irish Minister, Robert Brennan, arriving with his young daughter, Maeve . . . The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard being greeted on all sides . . . Handsome Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt sipping a cooling drink . . . Mrs. McNutt, not far away, garbed in pale green with a white frill at the neckline . . . Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell chatting with a group . . . Hugo Gouthier, of the Brazilian Embassy, explaining that his pretty wife was off in search of cooler weather . . . Sibilla Skidelsky in a chic tiered black frock and wide halo hat edged in black tulle . . . She was introducing the director of the Bank of Portugal, A. Cabral Pessoa . . . Ray Muir, who just returned from Lisbon . . . He is a member of the protocol division of the State Department . . . Mrs. Muir was smartly attired in black . . . Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, chatted with Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja . . . The Minister from Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi were accompanied by his daughter, Maria . . . Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, lovely in pink and gray jersey, talked with Mr. L. A. H. Peters, of the Netherlands legation . . . Miss Joy Powers, of Rosebud, Tex., was enjoying every minute of her first diplomatic reception . . . She is the guest of Mrs. Welly Hopkins, of Alexandria . . . Mrs. Robert Jackson, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, will return to Washington with her daughter, Mary, shortly from their summer home in Jamestown, N. Y.

Upon their return, the Jacksons will be busy moving from their Wardman Park apartment into the historic home which they have bought near Langley, Va., Hickory Hill. The house, which dates back to Civil War days, is now undergoing remodeling. The two living rooms, which had been made into one by the former owner, are being put back in their original form.

The house, of early colonial architecture, is set in the midst of wooded grounds. Proof that the Jacksons are preparing to enjoy their country life is the badminton court—the English game is one of the former Attorney General's favorite pastimes—and the newly built stables that are awaiting their three scheduled tenants.

A three-story establishment, the house combines the charm of the days of yore with the utility of modern design. An old-fashioned, dining room, papered in a blue Chippendale design and featuring an exquisite crystal chandelier, large fireplace and an antique mirror, opens into a kitchen that is the ultimate in modernity.

The third floor is in the throes of remodeling but a recreation room paneled in knotty pine is already finished and guest quarters are well on their way to completion. The second floor is devoted exclusively to sleeping quarters, boasting five bedrooms.

Justice Jackson, who is already installed in his office in the Supreme Court Building, spends his leisure moments supervising the renovating of his "country estate," though he is living in town until his wife and daughter return.

Keep Face Clean If You Desire That Cool Look

Best Beauty Tip For Summer Is To Fight Dirt

By Carolyn Abbott.

WASHINGTON'S humid, summer heat takes a heavy toll on beauty. With the temperature these days hovering between 80 and 96 degrees, it's a problem to keep make-up fresh looking. Perspiration not only causes it to smear but clogs the pores with grime, which in turn, produces a bumper crop of black heads and blemishes. Only by removing old make-up and cleansing the pores can you protect the skin and preserve a semblance of facial beauty. Change your make-up at least twice daily.

There are many ways of cleansing the face by creams, lotions, oils, or soap and water. You can combine any of the methods or stick to your preference of one—the important thing is to do a thorough cleansing job. No method is any good unless you apply it regularly.

Three times a day is not too often to cleanse the face. Twice daily is a must. Surface cleansing is a make-shift job, get down to the pores and eliminate all makeup and soil.

Hard Water Problem

Unless your skin is too dry, unusually sensitive, or filled with blackheads, a thorough soap and water cleansing should suffice. Experiment until you find a mild, pure soap that doesn't chap or irritate your skin. Washington water is hard and therefore trying on the best of complexions. To counteract this harshness, use a water softener or after cleansing spread a thin film of lubricating cream to restore the natural oils. However, if you have a problem skin, use either a cream or special liquid cleanser.

If you are in the adolescent stage and your skin has blemishes, blackheads or other eruptions, investigate the new liquid soaps. One, made especially for young skins, penetrates the pores and removes the root of the trouble. It has a medicated ingredient that heals as well as cleanses. Then there's a liquid lather for adults with sensitive skins. It draws from the pores all the old cosmetics and grime and is easy on dry leathery skins.

There is also a buttermilk cleanser made of 88 per cent buttermilk that is kind to tender and easily irritated skins. These cleansers are most effective when used with a complexion brush, which stirs up circulation which in turn helps to throw off the secretions in the pores. Also, it stars a new flow of natural oils in a too dry skin.

Types of Creams

In general there are three types of cleansing creams—the emulsifying, the liquefying and the cold cream. The emulsifying cream has a rich base for lubrication. This is especially appropriate for the dry skin. Often this type of cream or lotion is designated as a sensitive skin cleanser. The cold cream cleanser is heavier in body, and liquefies or melts on the face. It stays the same consistency and does not penetrate as deeply below the outer surface of the skin as a cream with an oily base. However, it contains a protective film that acts as a powder base, and is best suited to normal skins. The thicker the cream, the more it slides over the surface of the face pulling the skin and muscles out of shape. For the normal or dry skin, a light cream with an oily base is most effective as it cleans, softens and lubricates.

To cleanse the skin properly always use a skin freshener to remove the tiniest speck of cream. This acts as a solvent (water will not) and cuts the oil or grease of the cream.

Apply your cleansing cream in this manner, a technique followed by an internationally known beauty salon:

Saturate a piece of cotton with cold water. Wring out the excess and dip into your skin tonic. Now pat your face with the cotton to bring up circulation. Then take a clean pad, dip in water and skin tonic as before, fill with cleansing cream and apply to your face and neck. Use an upward, rotary movement. Remove the cream with tissues and pat on ice cold skin freshener or tonic.

With Confidence She Faces Rain, Sun and Wind

Cleanliness and protection are the secrets of this girl's flawless complexion. After a gallop across the hills on horseback or a game of tennis, she carefully removes all old make-up with cream. Then she adds a bit of powder base for protection

Diet Peculiarities Are Often Cause of Weight Problems

By Ida Jean Kain

Sometimes I have to marvel at how hard it is to sell women the idea of controlling their weight the easy way—just by eating intelligently. The other noon as I lunched with a smart career woman who is so thin she worries me, I couldn't resist giving her bread and butter plate a little shove in her direction. Well, you'd have thought it was horsemeat.

"I am off that stuff," she informed me with prompt finality. "It's fattening." And there was an accusative gleam in her eye as she added the query, "Do you write that column on slimming and then eat bread and butter?"

Food Idiosyncracies

Of course I do. Bread and butter have their place in the balanced menu. Besides, they are good food. It has been my observation that the people plagued with weight trouble, whether fat or thin, are the ones with pronounced food idiosyncracies—pecularities, preferences and phobias . They eat too much or too little and the wrong things.

If the angular girls would see that their meals measure up to the nutritional yardstick, and the fat girls would do the same with the calories scaled down, both could attain normal weight without having to do anything unusual.

It might be a very good plan for anyone whose weight varies from the normal to keep a diet diary with the list of essential foods pasted in the front for reference. Here I go again with the list of the protective foods! You need daily, regardless of your weight: One pint of milk, skimmed for the fat girl and reinforced with cream for the thin one; one egg, boiled or poached for the reducer and scrambled in butter for the underweight; two fresh vegetables, one a green leafy; a green salad, two fresh fruits, one a citrus fruit or tomato juice; whole grain or enriched bread, and butter.

Would Look Better

You could not possibly get so many calories in that list of protective foods that you would be fat. On that kind of diet, you would look better and feel better. Some of you thin girls with food phobias are so careful not to overeat that you are on deficient diets—and you might be bordering on deficiency diseases, too.

On the other hand, if you overweights would make it an inflexible rule to get all the foods listed in your protective menus, you would not be getting too many calories. It would not be so easy for you to overeat of the high calorie starches and fats. These foods are concentrated calories. You do not have to stuff on them to get fat.

Fat or thin, or with a tendency in either direction, it would pay you to look into this matter of balancing your menus. If your menus are balanced as to the protective foods and the calories are adjusted to your needs, your vitality is safeguarded and your weight practically takes care of itself.

Soothe Away Cranks With Cooling Bath

Unexpected spells of crankiness often occur among little children during summer days. Boys and girls who are "little angels" most of the time may suddenly become irritable and contrary—and frequently the cause is to be found in the hot weather. Children, like adults, react to sticky, humid days and may get restive and cranky.

When this happens, wise parents seek to make the children more comfortable. One good step is a cooling bath, but be sure that this is offered as a treat and not as a punishment for having been cranky. If the child thinks he is being punished he will probably set up another rebellion, even if he is old enough to realize how comfortable a bath will make him feel. Let the bath water be lukewarm and let the youngster play if he wants to for a short time in the tub. Then, when his good nature is restored, rinse him off, pat him dry, and put him into clean clothes.

Wall Map Today At Least Can Be Used to Decorate

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

With the boundaries of the world changing somewhere almost daily, maps are getting to be the center of interest in politically minded households. A big world map is a useful thing to have on the main wall of the family living room, and if this is planned as a part of the room, it can be a decorative detail as well as a focal point of discussion.

Mrs. R. K. L. writes about her living room which she has recently done over. It's a comfortable unpretentious room where all the family and lots of the neighborhood collect evenings after supper. The furniture was a hodge-podge, all friendly and informal enough. In an effort to pull it together, Mrs. R. K. L. bought her new pieces in colonial maple—a secretary and some small tables. The other wood pieces that she had to keep, a chest of drawers, two rockers and a larger table she painted in a soft blue-green, the color of the walls. The rug, a taupe broadloom, she had to keep but she brightened it by having the old taupe overstuffed furniture slipcovered in a flowered cretonne in mellow map-toned colorings. The new curtains she made of white dotted swiss with valance board covered with old maps used like wall paper. A whole set of problems were solved when she put up a large world map on a difficult wall—the map had to go somewhere . . . husband's orders . . . whereas that wall space didn't seem right for anything else. For lamp shades, she covered old paper shades with old maps.

But the big lift-up shelf table under the map was the real inspiration in the room. This her husband made—it was a broad strong shelf made with hinged braces so it could be dropped down out of the way when not needed. When needed it served as a place for Sonny to set up his electric train . . . for mother to cut out patterns . . . for father to spread out his newspaper maps and compare them with his world map above. The only catch was that rarely was the table let down against the wall, so constantly was it in use. Stained in maple tone, then waxed, it didn't look bad at all.

Make New Fall Slip Covers

WEEP no more, my lady—about that out-of-date old chair spoiling your plans for a fall fixing-up! Year-round slip covers are more popular than ever! And, the pin-on way, you can easily make one for your problem chair.

Think how lovely it would look in the cover—a sturdy cotton with autumn leaves and berries on a beige ground.

First step in making your cover is to remove cushion and smooth fabric down front of back and over seat, wrong side out if you're making welted seams. So cover won't rip under your first hefty guest, allow a generous tuck-in between back and seat—about 4 inches.

Now pin fabric along lines of the upholstery and cut 1½ inches outside pins to allow for seams. That's the way you fit the rest of your cover, too—arms, sides, back and front.

Carefully remove the pinned-up cover, baste and try on. Insert welting between seams before you stitch. Last is the flounce, which is very smart when made straight, with inverted pleats at the corners.

Directions for all-pleated and swag flounces, too, are given in our 40-page booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully." Tells how to cover all types of chairs and sofas the pin-on way, from fitting and cutting to sewing and finishing. Suggests fabrics, trimmings.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Is Man Justified in Pouting When His Shirts Don't Come Back on Time From the Laundry? Asks Very Discouraged Bride of Few Months

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have reached a point where I can't seem to invoke my own reasoning powers, so have decided to ask your point of view. I have been married only a few months and find myself just about to leave my husband,—which I am sure will shock my family and all my friends, since we are considered such a lovely couple. I have found that the man I married has changed into an inconsiderate, rude and I would even say mean person. Do men cease to be considerate and polite when they marry?

My husband pouts and goes into long periods of silence if I don't jump when he barks. He now dislikes my friends and refuses to either visit my family or have them visit us. Before marriage, he didn't specially care for them, but he accepted their hospitality and was friendly. Although I have a job, I do all the housework and cooking, because he says we cannot afford a maid. (I would settle for a cleaning woman, because we spend that much foolishly, anyway). But he thinks housework is a wife's proper task, and that I have no kick coming. Incidentally, we had agreed before marriage to do our own housework,—but now I do it all. His help consists in drying supper dishes.

Perhaps all newlyweds have these difficulties. Perhaps I should be thankful he doesn't drink to excess or have comparable vices. But I have reached the point where I can't take much more. I know I have faults, but I have at least managed to be considerate and civil. Do you think I am just another spoiled child coming to grips with reality? Or do you think a man is justified in pouting, and going into a long period of silence, because his shirts didn't come back from the laundry the day they were expected? I am anxious to have your opinion and I will take your advice.

E. V. E.

Two Persons in Need Of Restful Home

DEAR E. V. E.: You are chronically overtired (from carrying two jobs), resentful and disinclined to make the effort to be as winsome in your dealings with your husband as you were before marriage. He, on the other hand, is probably more worried by this vast new economic responsibility he has assumed than you suspect, and hence inclined to haggle over expenditures. Being worried, naturally he is afflicted by an unaccustomed chronic tiredness, too, even though he may not expend his physical energies to the same extent you are required to. (And, incidentally, there is no fatigue more enervating than psychic fatigue, such as worry induces).

To make matters worse, neither of you finds real rest of mind or body at home; nor sees the other person there at his relaxed, gracious and happy best. This is because your own morning, evening and days-off hours are mostly devoted to a tense drive to keep abreast of the distasteful housework to be done; and his, no doubt, to a semi-defiant, semi-apologetic scramble to keep out of your way (while reading, all the time, the coldly controlled irritation in your manner). And because your home,—run in this manner,—is never a quiet, shining, orderly, comfort-giving, sense-soothing place to come to and sink down in.

How different would be your reactions (of manners, of mental and emotional attitudes) toward each other, if you and he were privileged to start your mornings and spend your evenings together in a smooth-running household—where cleanliness, good food pleasingly served, and the maintenance of order in every room, were wrought by other hands and other strength than yours, so that you would have time for reading, loafing and talking with each other, in atmosphere of tranquillity and leisure.

As the situation stands, I daresay you rush home in an anticipatory fret, probably burdened with packages, to match off your hat, change to charwoman's garb and pitch into the exhausting chore of (as you probably bitterly reflect) "cleaning up this mess and feeding the brute." To see you thus tensely engaged and unbecomingly costumed, with the house at sixes and sevens; and at the same time not to be able to find (for instance) that clean shirt he was counting on, is sufficient to send your husband into a trance of gloomy silence,—where he wrestles with heaven only knows how many taunting specters of regret and disillusionment.

Whether or not he has said so, he probably is just as disenchanted with you, for the time being, as you are with him. He probably has his moments of wanting to walk out of the situation. As for his hostility toward your family and friends—it could be tied up with a realization that you have begun to think of him as a "pain in the neck," who has nested you in a bed of thorns. Smarting under your disapproval, he may shrink from facing them—in the role of a man who is manifestly failing to keep his bride well and happy. Your strained appearance and unloving manner may prompt his determination to avoid them. Also, one burdened with worries and fatigued by despondency is invariably averse to going about socially.

Your mutually accusatory resentment of the domestic situation naturally is rendering psychic and sexual harmony impossible—thus inducing a vicious circle of growing dissatisfaction and widening estrangement. But to abandon the marriage at this point, for the reasons declared, would be to acknowledge yourself a "spoiled child" and a quitter in the face of difficulties.

The better thing to do, I think, is to take the reins of domestic government in your own hands, for the purpose of giving yourself that New Deal which will enable you to be, henceforth, a better rested, more relaxed, more attractively groomed and gentler mannered companion to your husband than you have been, thus far. You need more time to devote to him if you would sweeten his disposition to the point where he will be involuntarily gallant in his treatment of you. And if wifely valeting makes him happy, why not oblige? Wouldn't you feel well rewarded if tenderly repaid in comparable coin?

Instead of "settling for a cleaning woman," employ a maid who will cook and clean and launder to a queen's taste, and pay her wages from your earnings. If it should be necessary to take cheaper lodgings in order to afford her services, by all means move. Where one lives isn't nearly so important as how one lives, when it comes to making one's home a place of beauty and a joy forever.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Canada Gets Peace; N. Y. Keeps Liberty

Canada can look for peace this summer, but liberty will stay in New York.

Peace and Liberty, by the way, are two of the eight grandly named daughters of former resident commissioner Santiago Iglesias of Puerto Rico.

The two girls disclosed yesterday that they had decided to devote their vacation this year to spreading the spirit of peace and liberty in the hemisphere—Peace fostering the spirit of peace, and Liberty doing the same for liberty.

The idea seemed so good that their six sisters—Equality, Fraternity, Justice, Light, America and Victory—chimed in with the announcement that they, too, would undertake similar missions on their vacations and seek to spread the ideals which inspired their names.

Peace is going to Canada, she said, with the hope of bringing peace to the British Empire.

Liberty is going to New York to climb the Statue of Liberty, among other things. She said she had not seen the statue since she came here from Puerto Rico 15 years ago.

Equality and Justice have chosen Salt Lake City, Utah.

America may be found visiting in California.

Light said she was going to get some sunshine on a beach in North Carolina.

Fraternity and Victory, both residents of Puerto Rico, have written their sisters that they intend to visit the mainland for their vacations.

Some of the girls who are married are planning to name any daughters that may be born to them according to the examples set them by their own parents, they said.

Names under consideration, they added, include Piety and Hilarity.

Birthday Fund May Benefit Woman Robbed of Savings

As Mrs. Rose Fones sat in her lonely room at 416 Third Street Northwest yesterday reading her Bible, the charitable impulses of Washington Post readers increased to $173.40 the fund being raised to replace the life savings that were stolen from her last week.

Mrs. Fones had kept her security against still more helpless old age under the mattress of her bed, where she could see and touch it. But sometime in the latter part of last week someone took the entire $1,167.

While police sought the thief, Post readers, moved by the utter woe that descended on the old lady, insisted on starting a fund to replace her savings. Yesterday neighbors, aware that Friday, August 22, will be Mrs. Fones' seventy-fourth birthday, discussed with enthusiasm the possibility of having a party for her at which all or most of the missing savings might be made up.

Mr. Fones at the same time expressed with quiet wonder and happiness her thankfulness toward the persons who have come to her help. She has had, she said, "a hard life," but the discovery that anyone could rob her of her all, "was the hardest part of it all."

Police last night continued their efforts to find the thief, and some at least of the missing money. The one suspect they have arrested has steadily maintained his innocence and when he was picked up after a $15 taxi ride to Richmond, was found to have only $18 in his possession.

Mrs. Fones this week expressed two decisions. One is to keep her money, if it is regained or replaced, in a bank instead of under a mattress. The other is to repay those who have been so good to her if it is ever in her power.

Women Already Have Won Place In Chemistry

By working in industry women are not really entering a new field but are merely sticking to their time honored jobs, according to Dr. Mildred M. Hicks-Bruun, chairman of the women chemists' committee for the One hundred and second national meeting of the American Chemical Society, to be held in Atlantic City, N. J., September 8 to 12.

"The home for a long time was a factory for spinning, weaving, making clothes and preserving foods," says Dr. Hicks-Bruun, who is a research chemist of the Sun Oil Co. laboratories at Norwood, Pa., and who for many years was associated with petroleum investigation at the National Bureau of Standards. "It was a hospital, a school, and, in general, a beehive of activities, initiated and conducted by women for the sole purpose of promoting comfortable, gracious living.

"Men have taken these activities from the home and developed them to a perfection which is delightful to contemplate, but they cannot expect women to lose interest or to enjoy becoming idle. From intellectual necessity women must become more a part of the industrial, business, and professional world."

Women have already won a place for themselves in chemistry, Dr. Hicks-Bruun points out, "not only because they have been diligent enough to acquire a thorough training in chemistry and related sciences, but also because they have such qualities as persistence, patience, neatness and accuracy in detail. They are essentially practical, can take responsibility and they turn out a better brand of routine than the average man does."

The National Tunes Up For Early 106th Season

Solid Bookings Follow August 25 Opening; Golden Bonus to Cast of 'Doubtful' Play; Items of News and Gossip About the Theater

NEWS OF THE NEW SEASON at the National Theater has bobbed up this weekend in such staggered fashion that our own habitual stagger has been considerably aggravated.

Late Thursday, but early enough to be whipped into what the trade calls a Sunday lead, came the announcement from Dick Maney, the Magnificent, in New York, that the National would open on Monday, August 25, with Edgar Selwyn's production of Frederick Hazlitt Brennan's new play of "The Wookey," with Edmund Gwenn in the title role. For complete information—we hope—concerning this item, see the dramatic department of tomorrow's big issue of the Sunday Washington Post. (Advt.)

KATHARINE CORNELL

Yesterday afternoon, hot on the heels—and I mean hot!—of this startling disclosure of fall in midsummer on E Street, came a comprehensive bulletin from Manager Edmund Plohn indicating that from August 25 on, the Capital's only tabernacle of the living drama is booked practically solid for goodness only knows how many weeks.

On September 1, "Two Story House," a new comedy by Parker W. Fennelly, will be presented by Brock Pemberton for a week's engagement prior to New York. Tryouts on the New England hay hat circuit are said to have proved this number worth an immediate Broadway showing.

On September 8, that bumptious buffoon, Ed Wynn, will bring his New York hit, "Boys and Girls Together," here for the first week of a tour that will extend to the Pacific Coast.

For the week of September 15, "Separate Rooms" will arrive from an uninterrupted run of 18 months on Broadway, with Alan Dinehart and Anna Sten—replacing Glenda Farrell—in the principal roles.

Following at early dates, but, one gathers, not necessarily in the order named, will come Katharine Cornell in her successful revival of Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma"; Al Jolson in "Hang Onto Your Hats" and the new Maxwell Anderson play, "Candle in the Wind," starring Helen Hayes, under the direction of Alfred Lunt.

From all of which it would appear that the venerable old National not only is banging open its 106th season a month or so earlier than has been the rule for the past too-many years, but with a lineup of attractions that carries the memories of the old-timers back to what is loosely referred to as the "golden era" of the stage. Incidentally, the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription season at the National has enrolled the greatest number of customers in its history. Only orchestra locations are now available to new or lagging subscribers.

And What Were They Afraid Of?

When Rose Franken's comedy-drama of "Claudia" was accorded its metropolitan premiere here late last winter, Producer John Golden and his associates had reached a tacit decision to close it here Saturday night if Washington turned thumbs down on the play. They were afraid its deeper meaning might be too deeply buried beneath a top veneer of brisk and breezy comedy.

Last Monday night, before the performance of "Claudia," at the Booth Theater, in New York, Assistant Postmaster Charles Lubin distributed a stack of Defense Savings Bonds to the cast of the play and the staff of the theater on behalf of Mr. Golden, who adopted this method of celebrating the play's 200th performance. All members of the cast received bonds in the amount of $200 each—which is by way of being a $1 bonus for each performance of "Claudia" since it opened last February.

What we never have been able to understand is why the "Poor Butterfly" man was fearful of this piece in the first place. But he insisted to this column that he was—until the Tuesday morning reviews came out.

When the locaal cricks talked with Red Skelton, in Hollywood, after the first performance of "Whistling in the Dark," at Loew's Capitol on Thursday, we followed Carter Barron on the wire, said hello to Edna, told Red something of the reception his first starring picture had received at the hands of an overflow house and then found Edna back on the phone. "Just an old softie," she said. "Red can't talk any more just now. He's crying." Clown or not, that Skelton is a sensitive and sentimental fellow.

So That's What They Call a Vacation!

It was Milt Crandall, one of the old war-horses of the publicity racket—he's been around so long that he was sure the dramatic editor of The Post must be the son of the dramatic editor of The Post, the flatterer—who put Universal on the spot in the matter of Peggy Moran's Tuesday visit to the Capital. Peggy is supposed to be on vacation. So, when she arrives here, she will be met by officials of the Treasury Department, will autograph Defense Stamp books in Treasury Square, flit down to Alexandria to be made an honorary Drum Majorette of the American Legion Band, meet the press at the Variety Club and then execute a few more patriotic chores. Outside of that, her time—that twenty-fifth hour in the day—will be absolutely her own!

What-Ails-Your-Memory Note

You don't remember Peggy Moran? Then you must have been the "sleeper" when she was seen at Keith's with Franchot Tone, Broderick Crawford and Mischa Auer in "The Trail of the Vigilantes." Besides that, she's pretty.

Star Learns About Highballs

Ronald Reagan has mastered the intricacies of the highball, but that doesn't mean he is planning a career as a bartender. He did his studying in a freight yard.

Reagan portrays a small-town youth who becomes a railroad switchman in "Kings Row," his next picture. The highball is a railroad man's signal, and Reagan had to learn all the signals in the interests of realism.

Reagan spent three hours in the local freight yards of the Santa Fe Railway under the tutelage of J. W. Murphy, assistant superintendent of the Los Angeles division. Murphy taught Reagan how to give lantern signals to enginemen, how to handle manually controlled switches and how to operate couplings.

That's Right, You're Wrong, It Isn't a Sarong!

languorously lolling around in a pareu, instead of what you thought. Experts have expressed the opinion, however, that the way Dottie wears it, the whatever-it-is looks even more sarongy than a sarong. The matter, of course, will not be definitely decided until Miss Lamour comes along to a local screen in Paramount's production of "Aloma of the South Seas," but in Technicolor

Earle

Enjoying the large and enthusiastic public response its subject so richly deserves, the Warner Brothers production of "Sergeant York" enters its second week at both the Earle and Ambassador theaters in such security that no one can predict when its run will end.

It has been iterated and reiterated here so many times that further repetition should not now be necessary. But the fact remains that this biographical study of a great soldier is not a war picture, in the usual sense, but a sane examination of the solidity of American character, with the scenes in the Argonne serving merely as the spark that touches off the power of the whole thing.

For more than half its length, "Sergeant York" offers a penetratingly human, humorous and romantic analysis of what goes into the making of character in the Tennessee mountains. It shows the evolution of a wild and irresponsible youth into a sturdy citizen and a deep religionist. The battle sequences on the Western Front in the First World War, occur in the climacteric second half of the film.

Since character rather than incident is at the basis of Sergt. Alvin C. York's life as reflected on the screen, characterization becomes more vital than physical action. This is admirably taken care of by an extraordinarily well chosen cast, headed by Gary Cooper in the title role. As Sergt. York himself expressed his approval of Cooper playing York, "He is the right size, a good shot and my kind of man." That about sums it up.

Three stellar performances support the star's. They are contributed by Walter Brennan, as the storekeeper-parson; Margaret Wycherly, as Mother York, and Joan Leslie, in the romantically important role of Gracie Williams. But the superlative work does not end there. Stanley Ridges, Ward Bond, George Tobias, Dickie Moore and a host of others add to the worth of a picture that no American should miss.

A Doggy Star

BRENDA MARSHALL, soon to be seen in the Warner Brothers' "Smiling Ghost," poses with a couple of her lap dogs. The picture evidently wasn't named for either of them

LEONARD LYONS, whose Broadway column appears regularly on this page, is on vacation until September 1. His pithy paragraphs will be resumed here on that date.

'Tain't True What They Say About Jester

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Aug. 8.—A national magazine wrote a yarn a couple of weeks ago about Bob Hope, saying among other things that he had glue on his hands when a dollar was concerned. That isn't so.

Hope doesn't need us to be defending him and he's not much bothered about what the magazine said about him, but the truth makes mighty interesting reading.

Last year Hope gave away almost $100,000 to charities like the Red Cross, the Community Chest, and the actors' relief fund. He set up his brother in business in Cleveland as the Hope Metal Products Co. This enterprise so far has cost him $65,000.

A tight man with a dollar, hey?

But that's only the beginning. Last February the Motion Picture Academy awarded him a special gold plaque for his work as a humanitarian. That meant the academy was appreciative of his performances, for, in the interests of charity. Hope put on shows for newsboys, bombing victims, tuberculosis sufferers and anybody else who was down on his luck. In one year he did better than 200 benefits.

Out of His Own Pocket

He paid his writers to think up good jokes so the shows would be successful. He generally paid his own expenses and he frequently left a cash donation on the side. Experts figure that had Hope turned all this effort to his own use last year, he would have earned himself an additional $500,000.

So that's that. Only trouble, so far as he's concerned, is that he hears the gent who wrote about him being a cheap skate is about to be fired. That worries Hope. He wants the writer to keep his job.

This Hope is a nice guy. He's also one of the most successful funny men in the business. At the moment he's so submerged in a sea of feminine beauty that he can't keep his mind on his work. No matter which way he looks, he sees some of the most beautiful girls in the world, wearing just as few clothes as the Hays office allows.

In production is "Louisiana Purchase," with Director Irving Cummings behind the Technicolor cameras and such folks as Hope, Zorina, Victor Moore and the beautiful girls in front. This is the show that B. C. DeSylva made such a hit with on the stage last year. Now DeSylva is Paramount's head man and he's giving his brain child the works in its cinematic version.

Gals Hard to Find

Take those beauties. He wanted an even dozen of them, so he first looked over the ladies who were so decorative in Metro's "Ziegfeld Girl." They were all beautiful, all right, but those that could sing acceptably couldn't dance. And vice-versa. Alaine Brandeis was the only one who got a job.

So the boys still haven't got their dozen girls. Miss Brandeis, Lynda Grey, who was in the stage show; Blanche Grady, a model; Eileen Haley, Kay Aldrich, the movie stock girl; Katharine Booth, Margaret Hayes, the movies' newest redhead; Barbara Slater, who sued to pose for the pictures her father painted, and Jean Phillips and Eleanor Stewart, of the Paramount stock list, are the only girls who could make the grade.

RKO-Keith's

Probably no one is called upon so frequently and would be able to limn so persuasively America's White Collar Girl as is fetching Ginger Rogers. With enchanting variations, the one-time dancing partner of Fred Astaire manages to personalize each of her working girls, the latest of whom, Janie, continues for a second week at RKO-Keith's, dreaming of a white knight named, at one time or another, "Tom, Dick and Harry."

This Janie is a telephone girl, a dreamy whack whose mind runs in such charming whirls that "Tom, Dick and Harry" becomes the most imaginative comedy of a summer in which comedies are many if not imaginative. With George Murphy, Alan Marshall and Burgess Meredith as her suitors, you'll wear a perpetual smile as you watch Ginger try to decide which to choose.

For one is promising, one is rich and the third likes to go fishing. She dreams of them, one by one, daft, improbable dreams that an imaginative script-writer, Paul Jarrico, and a witty director, Garson Kanin, make unpredictable. Those dream sequences really are something, with their impressionistic read "goofy" settings and character-keeping of the three boy-friends.

Other things you'll remember about "Tom, Dick and Harry:" Why autos are listed at $598, but sell for $1,107; how to leave a theater when the newsreels are picturing Herr Hitler, and what a kid sister should call a new beau. These and other niceties of our civilization are clearly explained in the hold-over feature.

Also on the Keith screen are an amusing "Information Please," with Anna Neagle as guest expert, but why it ends so abruptly is bound to annoy you; a Donald Duck adventure, and a generous helping of Pathe News. R. L. C.

Pete, the Pet Penguin

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 8.—I've interviewed lots of strange people, but the prize goes to Capt. R. T. Luxford, owner and trainer of "Pete," the only educated penguin in the world, who's giving the bird to "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

BINNIE BARNES

Pete was sent as a gift from the Galapagos. Capt. Luxford spent two years and $8,000 teaching him his first trick—to wear a hat. "Penguins," says he, "are the stubbornest animals in the world. Chief trouble is keeping them from biting people. Their bills are sharp as razors, and can snip off a finger in a twinkling. Having only two natural enemies, the whale and leopard seal, they're without innate fear."

Pete can tap dance, both ice and roller skate. He has 200 costumes, a portable dressing room and stand-in. Eats a third of his weight in fish daily. But as long as he supplies Capt. Luxford with caviar, they'll be the greatest of pals.

Binnie Barnes swears old fashioned courtesy is not dead. In a Westwood movie house she turned to the man behind her and asked if her hat bothered him. "No," he smiled, "but it bothers my wife. She wants one like it" . . . If we're not at war with Japan when E. H. Griffith finishes "Bahama Passage," he aims to take a trip over there—I suppose, to get away from it all.

Earl Wing, my "preview peeper," writes after seeing "The Little Foxes": "Sam Goldwyn doesn't run a factory, he runs an art. 'Little Foxes' is no exception. The hopeful in the audience went out feeling that for once they hadn't been talked down to. They saw a great picture and knew it. Bette Davis needs no humble words extolling her performance. She's conquered the kingdom. Patricia Collinge left me with a desire to talk about the art of acting with one who uses it so well. There are many synonyms for milestone. Let me add mine—"Little Foxes."

Jerome Cowan's false nose for "The Jungle Book" made him look like Jimmy Durante, so it was whittled down, and now he looks like W. C. Fields. . . . Billy Gilbert's worn his hair long for so long he's afraid some producer will ask him to play "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Cliff Nazarro says he's worked in so many Army pictures he can't get out of bed unless his wife plays reveille on the bugle . . . Blake Garner overheard two cuties discussing a wealthy octogenarian. "I know he's awfully rich, but he's too old to be really eligible." "Listen, Dearie," said the other, "he's too eligible to be considered old!"

"Beat Me, Daddy, 8 to the Bar"

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 8 (A.P.)—Police investigated today a report a man was beating a woman in a car. Officers returned empty-handed, but with this explanation:

"We tried to arrest the man, but the woman shooed us off.

"'Go away, officers,' she said, 'this is true love.'"

Broiled Chicken for Bait?

Arthur B. Joseph, of the faculty of Bliss Electrical School, Takoma Park, Md., would like to know how to trap a hawk. When he complained to town police that hawks nesting in the eaves of school buildings were devouring squirrels and birds about the campus he was advised to set traps.

Jury Clears Patrolman Who Slew 2

Policeman Testifies He Was Attacked By Pair Whom He Was Questioning

Patrolman Donald R. Webber, 28, Thirteenth Precinct, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday afternoon for the fatal shooting of two Negroes last Monday night in an alley in the rear of 2304 Fourteenth Street Northwest. The jury deliberated for 50 minutes.

Two brothers, Edward Cobb, 28, and Jasper Cobb, 35, 1404 Belmont Street Northwest, were shot by the officer. Jasper was shot three times and was pronounced dead at Garfield Hospital. His brother died of a bullet wound in his abdomen last Tuesday night at Freedmen's Hospital.

Investigation Fair

According to testimony, Webber while patroling his beat, went to the alley to investigate, when he saw two men standing beside an automobile. The car's ventilator was broken, the officer said. The men said the car belonged to them and when Webber asked for their driver's permit, they became abusive, it was testified.

Webber quoted them as saying, "We don't have to show you our driver's permit."

At that point, Webber said, he was convinced Jasper Cobb was drunk and attempted to place him under arrest. A struggle ensued and Webber's service pistol was taken from its holster, he said. He grabbed the butt of the gun, he said, and finally regained possession of it.

Believing his life was in danger, Webber said he fired. Three bullets struck Jasper Cobb and one hit his brother.

Lieut. Clarence H. Lutz, of No. 13 Precinct, testified that at the hospital, Edward Cobb said he had attacked the officer because the latter was beating his brother.

Man Hears Shots

Henry Davis, Negro, 1416 Belmont Street Northwest, the rear of whose house overlooks the alley, testified that he was retiring when he heard the shots. He ran down to the alley, he said, and found Jasper Cobb lying in the alley, with his brother standing over him, saying, "Oh, he killed my brother!"

Then, he said, the two brothers were removed to a hospital.

The inquest began at 11:30 a. m. and lasted for five hours. Twenty-two witnesses were called, including policemen, physicians and persons who came to the scene after the shooting.

The coroner's jury consisted of five white men, Warren Hillery, Gilbert Green, Clayton Henderson, R. B. Lavender and John W. McDermott, and one Negro, the Rev. F. I. A. Bennett, pastor of Calvary F. E. Church.

The jury reached a unanimous decision of justifiable homicide after a deliberation of 45 minutes.

Last night a meeting of the Joint Citizens Committee on Police Brutality condemned the fatal shootings as "flagrant, wanton and unnecessary." Plans were made for a combined memorial service for the two brothers and a protest demonstration tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. in the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, 1630 Vermont Avenue Northwest.

Lorton Prisoner Stabbed to Death By Fellow Inmate

A 28-year-old prisoner at Lorton Reformatory was stabbed to death yesterday by another convict who stole a table knife from the prison kitchen.

James McCray is the victim of the stabbing, which followed a fight in the prison laundry where he and his adversary were at work. Ray Huff, superintendent of District Penal Institutions, said William Turpin, 28, has confessed to the slaying.

Huff said he would turn the case over to the District Attorney's office after he had completed his inquiry.

Turpin, who has a long record, was serving 4 to 12 years for robbery, housebreaking and assault with intent to rob. McCray was serving two to three years for larceny and housebreaking.

Hotelmen Balk At Convention Curb Plan

Washington hotel men yesterday decided to seek a compromise to Price Administrator Henderson's proposal that conventions scheduled here for the next year be canceled.

At a meeting yesterday of the hotel men and the Greater National Capital committee, a three-man committee was appointed to study the situation, with the view of finding a "middle ground" to Henderson's drastic recommendation for easing the demand for rooming facilities. Involved is an estimated $500,000 of convention business.

The recommendation for curtailing Washington conventions was made by Henderson, Thursday, in a letter to the Hotel Association of Washington, in which he stated that rooming facilities were severely strained, and that accomodations were often unavailable when large conventions were in session.

Previous to Henderson's letter, the hotel association had issued a report on facilities which stated that plenty of rooms were available, adding that "blanket cancellations would have an adverse effect for a long time after the emergency ends, and that it would be an undesirable course which should be adopted only upon showing of a most urgent need which can be met in no other manner."

"Some efforts to discourage large conventions had already been made, the report said, and only 150 conventions were scheduled for this year in contrast with over 200 in 1940.

Miss Perkins Exceeds Rights, Mrs. Miller Says

Mrs. Helen Miller, who was discharged from the Department of Labor last week for alleged Communist activities, last night charged that Secretary Perkins "seems to set herself above the policies outlined by President Roosevelt" at a meeting of the United Federal Workers of America at the Burlington Hotel.

Mrs. Miller said "President Roosevelt stated a few years ago that organizations of Government employes have a logical place in Government affairs" adding "Madame Secretary says there can be no collective bargaining over the dismissal of a Government employe."

Detectives Honor Sergt. Jett, Retired

His erstwhile fellow officers presented two traveling bags to Henry M. Jett, recently retired detective sergeant, at Detective Bureau roll call yesterday morning.

The gift was handed to Jett by Capt. Ira E. Keck, acting detective chief, on behalf of men in the bureau. A member of the District police force for 35 years, Jett served with the Detective Bureau for 23 years. His commendations included one for the capture of a bank bandit in 1921 and another for apprehending a holdup man in 1926.

New Orleans Mayor Says Ideals Are Same As Those of Defense

The purposes of the Civilian Defense program and the American ideals of the American Legion were said to be one and the same thing last night by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, of New Orleans, principal speaker at the opening session of the District American Legion Auxiliary's convention at the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

About 500 delegates, alternates and guests attended the four-hour program, and heard Walmsley, now serving as deputy director of Civilian Defense, cite the legion and auxiliary as sources of potential leadership of promoting "morale and American principles in the present defense crisis."

A concert by the Navy Band Orchestra opened the convention, which was presided over by Mrs. Helen M. McCabe, department president of the auxiliary.

Other features of the program were vocal selections by Mrs. Florence V. Taylor and by the Capital Civic Male Chorus of the James E. Walker Legion Post, brief addresses of greeting by Fred G. Fraser, past department commander of the legion, and Alcse Legendre, national vice commander of the legion, and the presentation of an oxygen tent to Col. N. L. McDiarmid, superintendent of Columbia Hospital.

Trophies were awarded to various auxiliary units by Mrs. Mildred Bell, chairman of the committee on trophies and awards, as follows:

The Ruth Turner Americanism Trophy, to the Victory Unit No. 4; the "3 et 40's" Dorothy B. Harper Child Welfare Trophy, to the George E. Killeen Unit No. 25, the Mary B. Corwin Community Service and Unit Activities Trophy to the Kenneth Nash Unit No. 8, the Department History Trophy to the George E. Killeen Unit No. 25, the Anna F. Elliott History Trophy to the Sergt. Jasper Unit No. 13, and the Pan American Study Trophy to the Kenneth Nash Unit No. 8.

The convention will continue today with the girls' national conference at 9 a. m., a business session at 3:30 p. m. and a final meeting which will include election of officers at 7:30 p. m.

Smith Founder Of News Company

William Smith, father of radio's famous Kate, referred to in Thursday's Post as "a newspaper vendor," was the founder and owner of the Capital News Co., according to Kate's sister, Mrs. Helena Smith Steene, 3611 North Abingdon Street, Arlington, Va. The company, at one time ranked among the three largest distributing companies in Washington, and is now part of the American News Co., she reported.

D. C. Laundry Officials Face Court Charge

The United States Court of Appeals here yesterday ordered the Arcade Sunshine Laundry Co., and 14 of its officers and agents, to show cause why they should not be adjudged in contempt of court for violation of a decree of December 9, 1940.

The decree upheld an order of the National Labor Relations Board which directed the laundry to discontinue unfair labor practices of which it was convicted by the NLRB.

The NLRB last Monday filed a petition, supported by the affidavit of members Edwin S. Smith and Dr. William Leiserson, charging that the laundry had disobeyed the orders in favor of "a systematic campaign to thwart union organization."

The NLRB charged that this policy had continued during a strike of the laundry's workers which began July 2.

The strike has kept the courts busy with violent incidents, all blamed on "scabs" by the union and on strikers by officials of the laundry.

Justice Fred M. Vinson signed yesterday's order requiring the laundry and is officers to defend themselves. Justice Vinson allowed the respondents until September 8 to file written answers and set Monday, October 6, for a hearing in open court.

Named in order were the Arcade company, its president, Harry Viner, Melvin Viner, Robert Viner, Leonard Viner, Carl Linker, Lewis Brisker, Paul Jackson, Edmond Royal, Rose Moran, Stanley De Petro, William Mattingly, Harry T. Sarkin, John Risher and William Kidwell.

Brown to Quit 3 Posts Besides Police Leadership

Maj. Ernest W. Brown today will resign three major local posts in preparation for his retirement as chief of police. They include:

Membership in the District Boxing Commission; chairman of the civil protection committee of the District Defense Council and membership in the District Petroleum Conservation Committee.

The Commissioners said they would ask Acting Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly, after he takes office next week, to recommend a new police member of the boxing commission.

It appeared likely last night that Capt. Richard Mansfield, of the Ninth Precinct, would get the nomination.

D.C. Juvenile Court Gets Simon File

Young Hoodlum Gang Is Reported Involved in Death Of Exiled Editor

A homicide squad file which "tended to involve" a gang of youthful hoodlums in the murder of Dr. Heinrich Simon, 61, was referred to Juvenile Court for action yesterday.

Dr. Simon, a music critic and once editor of the German newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung, fled to this country from the Nazi regime and was beaten to death the night of May 5.

A gang of youngsters previously haled into Juvenile Court for automobile theft and other delinquencies appeared incriminated by statements assembled under direction of Acting Lieut. Jeremiah Flaherty. He submitted the file to the prosecutor's office.

Suspects Under 18

Acting District Attorney John W. Fihelly issued this statement:

"The police file in the Simon case was referred to this office by the head of the homicide squad and was immediately studied and examined.

"The file was found to contain data tending to involve certain named individuals in the killing. Before passing on the sufficiency of the evidence, Lieut. Flaherty made an investigation for this office to determine the exact age of all against whom there was any evidnce, and reported that all the parties involved were juveniles, that is, under the age of 18 years.

"Under the provisions of the new Juvenile Court Act, where anyone under 18 years of age has violated any law of the District of Columbia, including murder, the matter must first be taken up with the Juvenile Court. The file has, accordingly, been returned to the Police Department, for this reason."

Flaherty immediately sent the dossier to the Juvenile Court, where Assistant Corporation Counsel William C. Martin was studying it last night.

Six May Be Involved

The evidence was understood to involve at least two and possibly six youths, two of whom are no longer in the District. Martin said there was no procedure established for extraditing Juvenile Court defendants from other states.

Under the law, when offenders are less than 18 years old, but more than 16, the Juvenile Court can waive jurisdiction in favor of the District Court. But not if they are under 16 years old.

9 Are Injured In Collision Of D. C. Buses

Twelve persons were injured in District traffic yesterday, nine of them in a collision of two Capital Transit Co. buses.

Most seriously injured when one bus rammed into the rear of another in the 3600 block of New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, was Nathan Blandman, 71, 5400 Fifth Street Northwest. He was treated at Garfield Hospital for injuries of the left leg.

The following were bruised and shaken up: Jean Schwartz, 6614 Sixth Street Northwest; Gertrude Tierney, Silver Spring, Md.; Catherine Bowen, 322 Rittenhouse Street Northwest; Mrs. A. Rose, 120 Truscott Avenue, Takoma Park, D. C.; Goldie Anderson, 229 Hodges Lane, Takoma Park, D. C.; Ethel Pear, 715 Shepherd Street Northwest; J. F. Gunther, 4703 Ninth Street Northwest, and Marie A. West, 718 Marietta Place Northwest.

At Casualty Hospital Edward Welch, 12, Hollywood, Md., was treated for head injuries and Sully Mungo, 31, 615 N Street Northwest, for head injuries and possible fractures of the right arm and left leg. Welch was knocked from a bicycle in Berwyn, Md., by an automobile, while Mungo was struck by a car at Sixth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

SERENADE IN THE PARK—Beth Bon Durant, 16, plays a waltz melody on her violin for District Christian Endeavorers meeting last night in Palisades Park

There was an international flavor in the D. C. High School Christian Endeavor Union al fresco rally last night in Palisades Park, overlooking the Potomac.

Members of the Young People's Department of the Chinese Community Church, led by their pastor, Dr. C. C. Hung, were special guests; the local Endeavorers described missionary experiences of the famed Dr. N. B. Dunning, of India, and Rex Barger, Union President, is the son of missionaries to Brazil.

Speakers were Mrs. L. C. Greene, High School Union superintendent; Ruth Fowkes, Dorothy Worth and Wallace Shipp, their messages being based on Dr. Dunning's letters to the Union.

Blonde, attractive Beth Bon Durant, 16, music chairman of the Union, played several violin selections, and there was group singing. She is a member of Mount Rainier Christian Church Endeavor Society and McKinley Tech senior. Her father helped organize Mount Rainier Christian Church.

Trapp Family in Farewell Concert at Meridian Hill

By Ray C. B. Brown

C. C. Cappel and the National Capital Parks Service presents the Trapp Family Singers in Meridian Hill Park on Friday night. Program of folk songs and compositions by Orlando di Lasso, Palestrina, Josquin des Pres, Hassler, Beethoven, Sammartini, Hokanson and Schubert.

At their farewell appearance in Meridian Hill Park last evening, the Trapp Family Singers were greeted by one of the largest audiences assembled thus far in the series of Starlight chamber music concerts. The size and cordiality of the gathering was symptomatic of the abiding impression which these visitors have made with their completely natural and unaffected artistry.

BROWN

For the first time the entire family was united in Washington, and the three youngest children, not yet ready for public performance, were introduced at one of the intermissions, a surprise that made the occasion doubly memorable.

The group of liturgical compositions with which the program began was one of exceptional beauty, and they were sung with an affecting sincerity. There was a lovely motet, "Surrexit Pastor Bonus" by Roland de Lattre, the sixteenth-century Belgian composer commonly called Orlando di Lasso. From Palestrina's Missa Brevis came the second Kyrie and the Agnus Dei, intoned with reverence, and there was a hymn of royal authorship, "Crux Fidelis," by Joao IV of Portugal. One sometimes doubts the authenticity of music ascribed to monarchs, but King Joao was unquestionablya musician, so thoroughly versed in the art that he published in 1649 "A Defence of Modern Muic Against the Erroneous Opinions of Bishop Cyrillo Franco."

In the succeeding group of old secular songs a madrigal by Josquin des Pres was combined with Roland de Lattre's "Madonna mia cara," a humorous canon, "Falstaffere!," by Beethoven, and a canzonetta, "Tanzen and Springen," by Hans Leo Hassler, one of Nuremberg's greatest musicians, who was a boy of 12 when Hans Sachs died in 1576.

As instrumentalists, the Trapps specialized this time in music for the recorders or block flutes. They played a quartet sonata by Giambattista Sammartini, a "Laendler" arranged by Dr. Franz Wasner for seven recorders and viola da gamba, and a pleasant little "Pastorale" composed for them by Marghrethe Hokanson.

Schubert's "Der Lindenbaum" was appropriately placed among the folk songs with which the family closed their concert. The selections included "S'Gamserlschiessen," from the Tyrol, "Die Aeugian voll Wasser" and "Wia mei' Diandle, mei' kloans," from Carinthia, "S'Kuglate Gras," from lower Austria, "Maria durch ein Dornwald ging," a lovelilt from the Hebrides Islands, and Vaughan Williams' arrangement of "The Dark-Eyed Sailor."

Five Soldiers Held For Attack Upon 17-Year-Old Girl

Five Fort Meade soldiers, accused of attacking a 17-year-old girl near Berwyn, Md., were charged with rape yesterday at the direction of State's Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie, of Prince Georges County, and were held without bond in the Upper Marlboro Jail.

Those charged are Thomas Amato, 21, of Cleveland; Lee Schroeder, 26, of Baltimore; Cyril Beck, 25; William Greenjack, 23, and Francis Bauer, 32, all of Philadelphia. The men are members of the Sixty-first Surgical Hospital Unit at Fort Meade.

The girl told Maryland State police that she and a 19-year-old girl companion met the soldiers at a tavern on the Baltimore boulevard near Berwyn. She said the soldiers offered them a ride and they accepted.

Instead of taking them home, she told police, the soldiers drove to a deserted dirt road north of Berwyn. The older girl broke away from the men when the car stopped and ran into the nearby woods. Each of the soldiers then attacked the younger girl, according to her story.

D. C. Crime Bills Given Green Light

District Day Put Off, Habitual Criminal, Vagrancy Measures Will Get Hearing

House leaders yesterday granted special dispensation for action on two District crime-control bills, but called off the city's regular legislative day for the second time in succession.

At the request of Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, District Committee chairman, both majority and minority leaders agreed, Randolph said, that the crime measures will be allowed to come up under unanimous consent, although continuation of the debate on the draft-extension bill will force cancellation of the District day program Monday.

The previous District day last month was lost while the House voted to spend 35 million dollars for a new War Department Building in Arlington County, Va. Last night it appeared that the House will be in at least partial recess starting late next week until September 8, so that no action on other District bills can be expected before that date.

Vagrancy Bill Included

Rights of way were granted for Monday on bills to tighten the vagrancy and habitual criminal laws as recommended by a subcommittee that recently investigated the police department.

Citing failure of District judges to impose maximum penalties on "persons who are a potential menace to the community," the committee formally reported the bills to the House yesterday.

Existing law, the committee, declared, merely permits severe sentences for persons convicted of felonies more than once. The committee called attention to this statement in a recent report of the Washington Criminal Justice Association:

"Existing statutes make it possible to impose sentences of sufficient adequacy to discourage criminals from pursuing their systematic criminal behavior in the District. These additional penalties, however, are ignored by the court in pronouncing sentences. Since the maximum is rarely imposed, it is hardly to be expected that provisions for additional 'time' would have much significance."

Directed at Habituals

The proposed new vagrancy law which would require underworld characters to show lawful means of support, is "directed primarily to persons who are a potential menace to the community, and is so couched as not to be burdensome upon a person who is a victim of temporary misfortune," the report declared.

Calling attention to Washington's record of almost daily assaults on women, Randolph declared the legislation "essential to the security of Washington residents."

Chairman Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate District Committee, has assured him, Randolph said, that the bills will be acted on Tuesday if they pass the House Monday.

Cancellation of another District day will enforce a delay of nearly a month, and probably longer, on three District bills, all of which have been on the House calendar for many weeks. They would give the District a new small loans law, a step long advocated by members of Congress and city officials; increase the pay of police and fireman, and ban all forms of liquor price advertising.

Under the rules it would be possible for the crime bills to be blocked Monday by the objection of a single member, but Randolph said such a move was not expected. He said the procedure was agreed upon in conferences with Representatives McCormack and Martin, the majority and minority leaders, and with Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, ranking minority member of the District Committee.

Biddle to Weigh Data in U. S. Deal for Hotel

Acting Attorney General Francis Biddle has agreed to study the printed record of the House Buildings and Grounds Committee's investigation of the Dupont Circle Hotel deal before rendering a decision on the legality of the Government's commitment to lease the building, it was learned last night.

Biddle, it was understood, was prepared to make a quick decision on whether or not the lease agreement is binding, but after a conference with the committee chairman, Representative Fritz Lanham (Democrat), Texas, the Acting Attorney General agreed to wait until printed testimony of the committee's hearings is available for study. The record was sent to the Government Printing Office yesterday, but is not expected to be printed before Monday or Tuesday.

Virginians to Set Clocks Ahead, But Capital Is 'Standing Pat'

Daylight saving time becomes effective in parts of Virginia tomorrow, but the District is going to "stand pat" on its decision not to change schedules, Commissioner John Russell Young said last night.

"At least," he said, "we won't do anything until we are surrounded by daylight time."

Adjacent Virginia communities, it appears, are going to wait for Washington to act and Maryland isnt going to do anything at all because there has been no official request to set clocks ahead.

"If that is the case," said Young, "we'll keep the time we have and everybody apparently will be happy."

The Arlington County commissioners agreed yesterday they wouldn't follow Gov. Price's time-change request unless Washington switched over and simillar sentiments were echoed in Fairfax County and Alexandria.

From the office of Gov. O'Conor in Annapolis came word that Maryland still hasn't been informed officially of the President's appeal to southeastern States to adopt daylight saving in the interest of conserving electric power for national defense.

Although Gov. O'Conor was absent from Annapolis, a spokesman in his office said no instructions had been issued and the State would probably remain on Eastern Standard Time.

Several weeks ago, the President asked Atlantic Coast and Southeastern States to make he change in time, but neglected to mention the matter to Maryland and Gov. O'Conor said he would take no action. Doubt was expressed at the time that he had authority under the law.

Gen. Keefer Awards Certificates to Group

A class of 35 women drivers received certificates of membership in the gray-uniformed Red Cross Auxiliary Motor Corps last night, after completion of a 30-hour course in automobile mechanics given by the American Automobile Association.

The certificates were awarded by Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the District Red Cross Chapter, in a ceremony at the Red Cross House canteen room. The graduates were the third group to complete the course, which included mechanical work at the Central High School and lectures by members of the AAA staff.

The motor corps is a women's group used in the transportation of supplies and as ambulance drivers by the organization.

Those who received their certificates last night were: Jessie E. Barnette, Lelia Brown, Helen Campbell, Barbara Conard, Mrs. Charlotte Colloday, Florence Culver, Frances Danov, Mrs. Mary Douglas, Mrs. Louise Dixon, Margaret C. 1941 Auto Tags May Be Kept A Year to Save Defense Metal

Washington motorists next year may continue to use their 1941 automobile license plates in order to help save pressed steel for defense purposes.

Commissioner John Russel Young said yesterday he was studying a plan under which the current tags may remain in use after the March deadline. He said windshield stickers might be issued to show that car owners have paid their 1942 registration and tax fees and retain their same tag numbers.

His announcement followed suggestions from the Federal Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply that motorists in the 48 States and District of Columbia be required to turn in their 1941 licenses after the expiration date so they may go into defense production.

"By requiring the surrender of old license plates," OPACS said, "the States will add a sizable tonnage of scrap to the national supplies."

Because the time is too short to enable the various States to find suitable substances for steel, the Federal office said supplies of metal would not be withheld.

Allen Green, assistant superintendent of the Lorton Reformatory, where local tags are manufactured, said last night production had not as yet started on the 1942 series. He said the principal delay results from lack of paint and although bids have been let, there is no indication when work can start.

It takes some 142,000 pounds of pressed steel to make 250,000 sets of tags, Green estimated.

One Case Where Flock Is Preferred

New York, Aug. 8.—Yesterday we mentioned something about the Yanks believing that the Cardinals would give them much more of a run in the 1941 World Series than could the Dodgers. But, almost to the man, National League ball players hope that the Dodgers will win.

CONSIDINE

"We go out on the field to beat the Dodgers every time we meet them," a National League catcher told us not long ago. "In fact we probably try a little harder against them than any other club. But between you and me there isn't a guy in the league who wouldn't like to see them win, instead of the Cards.

"If the Cards win," he continued, "it's bound to hurt all of us. When we go to bat next winter and try to get a little more money out of our ball clubs, the fact that the Cards have won the pennant, if they do, will be an insurmountable obstacle in our way. That club is full of four thousand dollar ball players—kids who'd practically play for nothing just to get the chance to play in the big show. The Cardinal management knows this, takes advantage of it, and happens to have come up with a first-class ball club.

"So when we make a pitch for a pay raise next winter I can just hear what six or seven of those National League owners will say to us, if the cut-rate Cards have won. They'll say 'where do you get that stuff? What right have you got to ask for a raise, when ball players who are younger than you are, and apparently better, have won the pennant?'

"Here's hoping the Dodgers win. They're big league. They get good dough, big league dough. They play for a spending outfit that doesn't skimp on anything. It might be somebody else's money, but MacPhail has spent it this year the way ball players like to see it spent. He's no Breadon or Rickey; that's why we hope Brooklyn wins—not that any of us would give them anything on the ball field that they don't earn."

Del Baker Finds Fans Forgetful

Why is it taken so much for granted that Del Baker, manager of the Tigers, must be fired? About a year ago he was being hailed as a wonder manager. His Tigers were beginning the stretch drive which unseated the team that many called the greatest of all time—the Yankee aggregation which had won the title in 1936, 1937, 1938 and 1939. He was the pilot of the club that was bringing fresh dismay to the so-called Cleveland "cry babies." He was the new McGraw. We won't soon forget the champagne party tossed in his honor by Walter O. Briggs after the Tigers had clinched the pennant. It was held in the Hotel Cleveland after a ball game which had seen a loathsome crop of Cleveland fans throw everything except pedigreed deceased dogs at the Detroit ball club. Detroit won, beating Feller in a first rate ball game, and that was the pennant—three days before the end of the season.

We figure that Baker is a better manager today than he was a year ago, when he was being hailed as a wonder man. He has had more experience, seen more ball games, experienced more crises, learned how to meet more emergencies. The painful truth seems to be that another capable baseball veteran is about to be sacrificed in an effort to pull the wool over the eyes of a few boob fans who believe that the swoon of a ball club always can be traced directly to the manager. Baker won last year because he had the necessary tools with which to do a good job. He had Buck Newsom, who won 21 and lost only five; Schoolboy Rowe, who won 16 and lost only three; Tommy Bridges who won 12 and lost nine; Archie McKain, who won five and lost none; Billy Sullivan (.309), Charley Gehringer (.313) Rudy York (.316) Barney McCosky (.340) and a little number named Hank Greenberg, champion producer of runs, fine outfielder and .340 hitter.

Just Take a Look at Them Now

We won't rub salt in the wounds of the Messrs. Newsom, Rowe, Bridges, etc. by printing their 1941 records, but Sullivan is now hitting .282; McCosky, .327; York, .258 and Gehringer, .222. Greenberg hit a homer, two doubles and a single the other day—for the team of Southern Michigan State Prison, to which club he had been loaned for the afternoon by the Army.

Is all this Baker's fault? Of course not. The course of events and general deterioration and dry rot have caught up with the Tigers. A composite reincarnation of all the great managers of baseball history probably couldn't do anything about the 1941 Tigers. We think Baker deserves another year with Greenberg working for him and with the kind of replacements which Briggs' dough can buy. Anyway, we think it's crude and heartless to blame the guy for a failure that is not of his doing.

Erickson Allows One Hit, Stops Bucs, 1-0

Cubs' Rookie Strikes Out 6, Walks 3

Elliott's Single in 7th Spoils No-Hit Game; Chicago Gets 10 Hits Off Lanning

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Paul Erickson, 23-year-old Chicago Cubs right-hander, stopped the Pittsburgh Pirates with one hit today to score his first major league pitching victory, 1 to 0, and end a Pirate winning streak at six games.

The only hit off the lanky Erickson came in the seventh inning when Bob Elliott slashed a single to center field. Only 30 Bucs faced him. He struck out six and walked three.

The Cubs scored their run in the fifth inning off Johnny Lanning, whom they touched for ten hits during the game. With one out Charley Gilbert walked and went to third on Bill Nicholson's double, one of three hits by the Cubs' right fielder. Dallessandro ran for Gilbert, who pulled up at third with a sore leg muscle.

Babe Dahlgren struck out and Phil Cavarretta was walked. Clyde McCullough beat out a hit to deep short and Dallessandro scored.

Fans Two Pinch-Hitters

In the ninth inning Erickson fanned Pirate Pinch-hitters Soud Davis and Debs Garms, and then walked Arky Vaughan. But the game ended when Elliott forced Vaughan.

The Cubs' rookie hurler, whose record previous to today had included only three defeats and no wins, aided his team's defense in the third by making a bare-hand stop to start a double play on Handley and Lanning. The victory marked only the fourth time the Pirates have been beaten in their last 22 games.

Manager Jimmy Wilson has been working with Erickson all season in hopes of making him a regular on the Cubs' pitching staff. Last Monday Paul struck out 10 Cardinals, walked only three and allowed nine hits but lost, 4 to 2.

Chrysler Pays $18,500 Price For Yearling

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 8.—In the most spirited as well as the most expensive bidding of the 1941 Saratoga horse sales Walter P. Chrysler, jr., owner of the Breymann Stable, tonight purchased a beautiful imported chestnut colt by Hyperion—Imp. Penicink II from Arthur B. Hancock's consignment.

Chrysler bid $18,500, setting a record for this year's yearling auctions, which opened Monday.

The Hancock yearlings came from the Claiborne Stud at Paris, Ky., and Ellerslie Stud at Charlottesville, Va. The consignment of 51 head was sold for $184,400, another record for this year's sales. The average was $3223 per head. Last year 54 Hancock yearlings were sold for $208,550, averaging $3862.

Two other youngsters sold tonight surpassed the previous high bid of $10,000. Harry Guggenheim, owner of the Falaise Stable, took a dark bay filly by Imp. Blenheim II—Risk for $10,500, and J. P. Smith purchased an imported gray filly by Imp. Mahmoud—Imp. Miss Erne III for $10,100. Another notable price was the $9500 which William du Pont, jr., paid for an imported dark bay colt by Dastur—Book Law.

Ending the first week of this year's sales, the grand total reached $565,850 for 266 yearlings, an average price of $2127 a head.

Jim Tobin Bows As Brooklyn Takes 7th Straight; Homer By Medwick Helps

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 8.—The hustling Brooklyn Dodgers regained first place in the National League today by bullying the Boston Braves, 6 to 2, as Whitlow Wyatt rolled to his fifteenth triumph with a six-hit performance.

This gave the Dodgers a .647 percentage compared to .644 for the idle St. Louis Cardinals, although the two rivals were tied in won-lost computation.

It was Brooklyn's seventh straight victory and the Dodgers made it decisive with a dozen hits off Jim Tobin.

They let loose a three-run barrage on four hits in the second inning. Dolph Camilli and Jim Wasdell singled and Lew Riggs doubled for a run before anyone went out. Then Mickey Owen raised an outfield fly which scored another and Peewee Reese singled for a third.

Joe Medwick hit his thirteenth home run in the sixth and led off with a double in the eighth to score on a two-bagger by Wasdell. Brooklyn's other tally came in the seventh when Owen beat out a bunt, was sacrificed to second and scored on Billy Herman's sharp single through the center of the diamond.

Boston nicked Wyatt for a run in the second with the help of an error. Eddie Miller singled with two out, Ray Berres walked and Miller scored on a wild throw by Reese. The Braves' other run came in the eighth on a single by Cooney, a double by Sibby Sisti and an infield out.

Chisox Rout Browns, 16-2; Homers Help

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 8—The St. Louis Browns may be able to beat the Yankees but they are meat for the Chicago White Sox, who might be in first place instead of fourth if they could play the Brownies every day.

Last night the Sox trounced the Browns, 11 to 1, and today Bill Dietrich tossed a neat 4-hit performance to smother them, 16 to 2. It was his fifth win of the year against six defeats. Bob Harris, who shut out the Yankees in one game Sunday, was knocked out with seven hits in three innings. George Caster finished by allowing eight base knocks.

A crowd of less than 600 cash customers saw the slaughter.

Bosox Trounce Nats, 15-8; Sundra Pounded

Boston Collects 16 Hits; Griffs Score Two In First and Yawkeymen Tally 6 Times

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, Mass., Aug. 8.—The Nats pounded Charley Wagner and Mike Ryba for 14 hits here today, but it might be wise to avoid jumping to conclusions. While the Nats were thumping Boston's pitchers the Red Sox hitters were teeing off more lustily on Washington's Steve Sundra and Arnold Anderson, collecting 16 hits en route to a 15-8 victory.

The Nats were suffering their most humiliating defeat of the season, which should present some idea of how horribly they were performing. While Sundra and Anderson were collaborating in hitting Boston bats regularly, walking seven and hitting another, the Nats were aiding the Red Sox with four errors.

Washington, in achieving its fourteenth loss in 15 Eastern road games, preserved its record of failing to win a game at Fenway Park this season. Sundra assured himself of his ninth loss of the season as early as the first inning, when the Red Sox clustered six runs.

It was a beautiful start the Nats made, collecting two runs in the first inning on singles by George Case, Buddy Lewis and George Archie and Jimmy Foxx's error, but when Boston came to bat the complexion of the contest was altered rapidly and emphatically.

Sundra Walks Two

Sundra walked Dominic DiMaggio and then developed the habit. He also walked Pete Fox and after Joe Cronin sacrificed he purposely passed Ted Williams, filling the bases. The strategy of the Nats wasn't clicking, for Jim Tabor lashed a single off Shortstop Cecil Travis' glove, scoring DiMaggio and Fox. The parade was on.

Jimmy Foxx, who delivered three singles and a double, drilled a single to left, again filling the bases and into that situation stepped Bobby Doerr and whacked a double to left, scoring Williams and Tabor. Sundra left the game at that point, but the Red Sox failed to detect any difference in Washington's pitching, for little Frankie Pytlak

29,270 See Macks Whip Yankees, 5-3

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 8.—Bob Johnson's twentieth homer of the season with two on base in the fifth gave the Athletics a 5-to-3 victory over the New York Yankees before 29,270 at Shibe Park tonight. The defeat ended a four-game losing streak for the A's.

Johnson's smash climaxed a four-run uprising that drove Steve Peek to the showers and wiped out a 3-1 Yankee lead.

Al Brancato singled to start the big fifth for the Mackmen. Phil Marchildon sacrificed. Wally Moses singled to score Brancato. Benny McCoy then walked to set the stage for Johnson's game-winning four-base clout.

Ernie Bonham held the A's in check the rest of the way, but the Yanks could do nothing against Marchildon, rookie pitcher who chalked up his eighth victory of the season against eight defeats. Outside of Charley Keller, who got four for four, including three doubles, the heavy-hitting Yanks were helpless after the third inning.

In the second the Yanks got two runs on doubles by Keller and Joe Gordon, a walk, a fielder's choice and McCoy's wild throw. In the third Tommy Heinrich singled and romped home on Keller's second two-bagger. In the last six innings Marchildon yielded only three hits, two of them by Keller.

Young's Homer Beats Phils, 3-2, for Giants

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 8.—For three straight games Norman (Babe) Young hit a home run while the New York Giants lost, but today he connected for his fourth in a row and brought the Giants a 3-to-2 victory over the Phillies in the eleventh inning.

The contest was a fine pitching battle all the way, with Bill Lohrman of the Giants allowing only six hits and Cy Blanton of the losers giving eight.

Philadelphia scored in the second inning on a double by Danny Litwhiler and a single by Bob Bragan. Ben Warren also singled in this inning. Rookie Jim Carlin singled in the third and in the fourth the Phils got their other run. Merrill May and Bragan hit successive singles, Warren was purposely passed and May scored on a double play.

After that Lohrman pitched no-hit ball for seven innings.

The Giants scored twice in the second on three singles and an error and never threatened again until Young led off with his fifteenth home run in the eleventh.

Gray, Toronto Pro, Leads Canadian Open

Pace Setter Posts Sub-Par 65; Bulla In Second Place; Three Tied for Third

By the Associated Press

Toronto, Aug. 8.—Bob Gray, jr., Toronto professional, shot a five-under-par 65 over the Lambton course today to take the lead in the Canadian Open golf championship and raise the home folks' hopes of bringing the title back to the Dominion for the first time in 27 years.

Gray, a hot-and-cold golfer, had shot a par 70 yesterday and his round today that set a competitive course record gave him a 135 total at the tournament halfway mark.

Staggering along behind him at the head of the United States contingent came big Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, who added a 69 to his opening round 68 for a total of 137. Tied for third, another stroke back, were Tom Draper, the husky St. Louis amateur who set the pace yesterday, the Veteran Gene Sarazen, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., and Horton Smith, of Pinehurst, N. C., slipped a trifle for a 71 today, Sarazen had a 68 and Smith a 79.

Defending Champion Sammy Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., blasted out a sub-par 68 but it was only good enough to give him a tie at 139 with Lloyd Mangrum, of Monterey Park, Calif. Mangrum added a 71 to yesterday's 68. Gerard Proulx, the power hitter from Montreal fired his second straight par round and was all alone at 140.

Plenty Long Drives

Six sub-par rounds and ten even pars were recorded in today's blazing heat on a baked course that gave everyone plenty of distance.

Twenty players came in with two-day totals of 144 or better. All the prominent United States and Canadian entries came in under the wire, however, when the field was cut to the low 60 and tied for tomorrow's 36-hole final.

Snead, whose putting was uncertain despite his sub-par score, again was troubled by a large gallery. Officials advanced his starting time ahead three hours to noon, but 500 fans followed him. Several times he tossed his clubs aside in exasperation after making poor shots.

Joe Bowman Balks in Trade To St. Paul

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 8.—Joe Bowman, veteran hurler of the Pittsburgh Pirates, balked tonight when notified he had been traded to St. Paul of the American Association for Oral Hildebrand, another veteran pitcher.

Bowman said he planned to see Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis to determine if he could avoid being sent to the minors. He has a sore arm and said he would go to his home in Kansas City to "think matters over." This is his ninth year in the majors.

Hildebrand went to St. Paul three years ago after a long stretch in the American League. He has won five and lost three games this year and is expected to report tomorrow morning at St. Louis.

It was understood the trade was made on a straight basis with no cash involved.

Million-Dollar Gate Seen for Louis-Nova Fight September 19

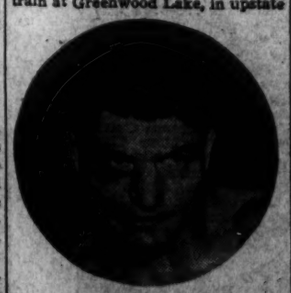
By Bob Considine.

New York, Aug. 8.—Envisioning the return of the million dollar gate, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced late today that the Joe Louis-Lou Nova fight will be staged in New York, at the Yankee Stadium, on the night of September 19.

Thus ended the most active civic-bidding for a heavyweight championship fight since the Dempsey-Tunney matches. Mayor Edward J. Jeffries and the Detroit board of trade promised Jacobs $200,000 worth of ticket sales in the auto industry alone, if he moved the fight to the Motor City. A Chicago group, with former Boxing Boss Billy Carey at its head, assured Jacobs of a similar basic income, if Chicago got the match. A Boston group, headed by Tom Yawkey, offered a $350,000 "guarantee." Ed Bang, representative of a group of Cleveland sportsmen, put in a similar bid.

Nova, a disciple of Yoga and experimenter with such mystifying boxing quirks as the "cosmic punch," will arrive here Tuesday. The California challenger, twice conqueror of Max Baer, has been hardening his massive frame in the Maine woods for a month. He has done little or no boxing, but during this period he has grown a flourishing mustache and taken further instructions in what he calls "dynamic posture."

JOE LOUIS



LOU NOVA

Louis to Get Big Cut

Louis will arrive here August 22, after the close of the Joe Louis Open, a golf tournament for Negro players. The champion, who will be making his nineteenth defense of the title he won from Jim Braddock in June of 1937, wanted Detroit to get the fight. But his disappointment over this will probably be assuaged when he signs the articles for the scrap. For he will get 43⅓ per cent of the gate, as opposed to Nova's 17½ per cent.

Louis wanted the fight to go to Detroit because if it had he could have trained on his dude ranch at nearby Utica, Mich. Now he will train at Greenwood Lake, in upstate New York. Nova probably will train at some site in New Jersey, though he may possibly go back to Nyack, N. Y., where he learned the rudiments of the Yoga beliefs under the tutelage of Cultist Pierre Bernard, called Oom the Omnipotent by devout disciples.

May Draw Million Dollars

Jacobs foresees a possible million dollar gate because of the "enormous" number of orders for tickets which already have come into his office on Jacobs Beach. The Louis-Conn fight grossed $451,000, though Louis ruled an overwhelming favorite before the fight. The champion may be no more than a 5-to-8 shot for the Nova fight, if Nova impresses in his training.

Top priced tickets for the Louis-Conn fight sold for $25, but it is possible that they may be listed at $40 for the meeting between the Bomber and the man who came back from the abysmal status of having been knocked cold and clammy by Tony Galento.

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Chicago Cardinals, of the National Football League, today announced the signing of Ray Mallouf, John L. Clement and Fred Harris, all members of the Southern Methodist University eleven last season. Mallouf and Clement are halfbacks and Harris a tackle.

They will report Sunday to the Cardinals' training base at Morgan Park Military Academ

Welsh Nears Singles Title But Faces Battle in Doubles

Champ Tops Channing By 6-2, 6-3

Barney Shouldn't Miss 8th Straight Crown; Team of Bennion and Underwood Threatens

By Jack Munhall

Brushing aside seventh-ranked Charley Channing in the semifinals at Edgemoor Club, Barney Welsh yesterday neared an eighth successive District tennis title in his record streak of victories, but due to a not unexpected turn of events there was seen evidence anew that the Rockville Rambler really will have to step out to win the doubles, too.

There was no sign of deterioration in Welsh's game as he outsteadied Channing, 6—2, 6—3, nor was the perennial local net ruler unimpressive as he and Hugh Lynch reached the doubles finals by smacking down fourth-seeded Channing and Breese, 6—3, 6—4. However, so superbly did the dark-horse team of Dick Bennion and Bob Underwood play in their semifinals upset of Don Leavens and Dick Murphy, that today in the doubles title round Welsh may find himself in the role of an underdog for the first time in a decade of District tournament competition. The doubles finals will be at 3:30 p. m.

Bennion, the former Utah star, and Underwood, who was turned out by Stanford, stole the show yesterday with their aggressiveness and skill against which the newly-formed second-ranked team of Leavens and Murphy hadn't a chance.

Team Outclassed

It was almost unbelievable to see Murphy, a former Longwood Bowl champion and one of the top local players, and Leavens, who is topped in singles only by Welsh, so thoroughly outclassed. They didn't get a game in the first set until they trailed hopelessly at 5—0, and though they made a stirring rally to pull to 4—5, the result of the match was a foregone conclusion after that fifth game.

Bennion and Underwood, who play the most nearly perfect doubles of any team seen here in years and years, seemed to have a pre-arranged strategy of going all out in the first few games of each set in order to take a comfortable lead. Once this was accomplished, they conserved their strength and merely concentrated on holding service.

That's about what happened in the first set. After they led 5—0, the West Coast stars began to hang in the back court instead of rushing the net, where they had won most of their points, and as they did Leavens and Murphy began to click. But once Bennion and Underwood were seriously threatened, as they were at 5—4 they resumed their aggressive tactics and closed out easily, breaking Leavens' service at 15.

Smooth Sailing

Their superiority was even more clear-cut in the second set. Bennion got them a 1—0 lead by taking his service at love for the third time. Leavens tied up the count in the second by also holding his service at 15, but that was as close as the losers came to evening up the match. Trailing 1—2 after Murphy held, Underwood held service in a deuced fourth game, after having the odd against him, and in the fifth he and Bennion cracked through Murphy for a 3—2 advantage. From then on they coasted, coming to the net when points were needed, to wham overheads over the fence as they did all afternoon. Underwood won the match point when Leavens netted a tricky-spinning second service.

Welsh's singles opponent for the title match, which will be played Sunday, will be determined at 2 this afternoon when Leavens, seeded second, meets third-ranked Hugh Lynch. This will be the third time in as many tournaments that this pair has met in the semifinals. Leavens won both times before, but only after terrific struggles. In their recent meeting, in the Middle Atlantic tournament, Lynch took two of the first three sets, 6—4, 2—6, 6—2, but then suddenly cooled off in a hurry and dropped 13 straight games while losing the last two sets badly.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Chevrons for Hank

Corporal Greenberg, Sir, In Charge of Antitank Gun

Hank's Pay Increased to $648 Yearly, Slightly Under $55,000 Baseball Salary

By the Associated Press

Fort Custer, Mich., Aug. 8.—It's Corpl. Henry Greenberg now, in charge of a five-man antitank gun crew.

The erstwhile big gun of the Detroit Tigers baseball team is now responsible for the care of one of the Army's 37-millimeter antitank guns and of the truck that hauls it and its crew into firing position.

HANK GREENBERG

Greenberg's promotion, his second in a month, was announced at headquarters of the Second Infantry regiment today. He was advanced to the grade of private first class on July 14.

As a corporal, the former outfielder who was last year's "most valuable player" in the American League is eligible for an increase in pay from $21 to $54 a month. He can't draw this amount until after September 6, however, because Army regulations require a man to be in the service four months before he draws increased pay, Greenberg was inducted on May 7.

The corporal's pay figures out to $648 annually. Before he entered the Army, Corpl Greenberg would have needed almost two afternoons of baseball play to earn that amount, at his 1941 Detroit salary which was reported to be $55,000.

The reason for big Hank's promotion? It wasn't because he accompanied the Port Custer reception center baseball team to southern Michigan prison Wednesday and then played for the prison team, hitting a home run, two doubles and a single.

Capt. Glenn A. Sikes, who recommended chevrons for Hank, said tonight: "The company commander tries to pick out his best men for promotion. I gave Greenberg a chance in close order drill and in calisthenics for advancement to the grade of corporal and I thought he was doing better than anybody else."

As a corporal responsible for the antitank gun, its truck and five-man crew, Capt. Sikes said, Greenberg "will be excused from all of the routine duties which a private performs, but as corporal he will have added responsibilities including the policing of the barracks."

Putting Honors Taken By Mrs. Patricia Abell

Victor in the Indian Spring Club ladies' day tournament was Mrs. Patricia Abell, of Columbia, who took putting honors with 32 in 18 holes. Mrs. Willard Edwards won nine-hole putting with 16 strokes.

Mrs. Rich Dunbar, with a score of 105, 23—82, took the net play at 18 holes, while Mrs. Frank Kennedy had the best score in nine holes with 56, 13—43.

Mrs. Don Lee and Mrs. R. E. Hotze tied yesterday in Washington Golf and Country Club's weekly Ladies' Day Tournament, each scoring 26 in the "5 secret holes" affair. One stroke back, also tied, were Mrs. R. Harr and Mrs. P. Adams.

All-Stars Lose To Costello; Carroll Hurls

The best line-up obtainable from the other seven clubs in the local American Legion Junior Baseball League wasn't good enough to stop the champion Costello Post nine yesterday in a well-played exhibition at Griffith Stadium. The All-Stars were on the short end of a 4-1 count, largely through the efforts of Billy Carroll, Costello hurler.

The young right hander, a Gonzaga High stalwart, issued only three hits during hostilities. He was never in trouble. The losers' only run came over in the ninth inning as Charley Hines, All-Star moundsman, pounded out a home run. It was one of two safeties for him.

Bob Mulvihill, another Gonzaga star, provided another fine batting exhibition of the game, registering two hits, including a triple in four trips to the plate.

The two teams meet again today at the Stadium, starting at 2 p. m. Monday Costello will leave for the legion regional playoffs in Albemarle, N. C.

Bogart-Malone Bow, 2 and 1, At Winged Foot

By the Associated Press

Mammaroneck, N. Y., Aug. 8.—After holding the John G. Anderson Memorial Cup in the annual best-ball golf tournament of the Winged Foot Club for two years, Willie Turnesa, former National champion, and Udo Reinach, of the Fairview Country Club of White Plains, left the field open to a new winner today.

In the sixteenth match since they began to click as a team, they were downed in the second round by Thomas K. O'Brien and Edmond B. Overton, of Pelham, N. Y.

Turnesa was 3 under par to the turn and the best ball of his side was 33. That is 4 under par, but O'Brien and Overton were sticking to their opponents like glue. They were only 1 down with O'Brien showing four times and Overton five times.

Turnesa began to find the bunkers coming back. The match was squared at the eleventh as Overton holed a par. The same player sank a 15-foot putt to put his side ahead at the twelfth and then down a birdie 2 to be 2 up. O'Brien closed the two-time winners out with a great spoon shot at the sixteenth.

District Hopes Bow

Otto Greiner and Don O'Brien, of Baltimore, last year's runners-up, escaped the fate of the cup holders when they defeated the Washington (D. C.) team, Ralph Bogart and Charles Malone, 2 and 1. Malone, who played end on the Washington Indians professional football team, put his side in front at the tenth. Greiner tied it up with a birdie at the eleventh and O'Brien made the 2 that won the match at the short thirteenth. The last five holes were halved.

Mark Stuart and Arthur Atkinson came through by 2 and 1 against Sam Bates, the Virginia champion, and Lawrence O'Brien when Atkinson holed a 2 at the thirteenth and both had a birdie at the fourteenth. Atkinson and Stuart were 1 up at the tenth, but Bates squared a hole later.

The medalists, Stephen Berrien and Robert Montgomery, of Upper Montclair, N. J., won two matches during the day by 1 up. Berrien captured the afternoon assignment from Walter Beckjord and A. C. Williams, of New Haven, when he sank a putt of 40 feet from the edge of the green.

Sara Moore Wins D. C. Net League Crown

Tough-luck Charlotte Decker, who has spent the last several years losing to Willie Herbert in finals of local tennis tournaments, missed her big chance yesterday when she lost the District Women's Tennis League title match to fourth-seeded Sara Moore on the Reservoir courts.

Miss Decker, top-seeded in the absence of the defending champion, Mrs. Herbert, had been heavily favored to beat the come-backing Miss Moore, but she bowed to her rival's superior driving power, 6—3, 7—5. And to make it an even tougher defeat for Miss Decker, Miss Moore won the second set after trailing, 5—3.

Miss Moore, a former local champion who was unable to play at all last year because of an injury, made a surprisingly good showing, and her improved form plus an unusually lot of errors by Miss Decker combined to make the match unpectedly one-sided.

The doubles finals which was to have been played yesterday had to be postponed two weeks after Mrs. Herbert and Miss Decker divided 6—3 sets with Frances Rowan and Peggy Smith. Late in starting, the doubles was interrupted by darkness. The two-week postponement is necessary because Miss Decker will be out of town.

Miss Echols was graduated from Montgomery Blair High School in June

O'Donnell's Tops Cameo By 8 to 3

With Pitcher Bill Helmer doing most of the shoving, O'Donnell's Grill nine gave the skidding Cameo Furniture club a further boost downward in The Washington Post-Industrial League race yesterday, slamming out an 8-3 decision on the Ellipse.

It was the Furnituremen's third straight setback. Helmer cleverly scattered four hits, allowed only two bases on balls and struck out four. The loss dropped Cameo's representatives into second place again after a Heurich victory over the first-place Little Tavern Thursday had temporarily put them in the lead.

Three Grill tallies in the first frame, fashioned from a single hit and three Cameo misplays, launched the winning effort. First Tommy Hahn and then Otis Printz went to the mound for the losers, between them allowing O'Donnell's nine hits.

Archie Via, husky rightfielder, paced the winner's attack with three hits in four trips to the plate. His double in the opening frame scored the first run.

Best blow of the day went to John Durkin, Grill centerfielder, who banged out a home run in the fifth inning with a mate on base.

Deyoe, Rapley Among Skeet Shoot Leaders

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, Aug. 8.—Headed by defending champion 19-year-old Dick Shaughnessy, of Dedham, Mass., ten shooters broke 100 targets in a row today to pace a field of 305 through the first section of the 250-clay, three-day test for the National All-Gauge Skeet Championship.

Back of the leaders, with scores of 99 of 100, were 16 of the Nation's topflight scattergun artists as the field, biggest in the national event's history, staged the greatest scoring spree the classic has ever witnessed.

Tied with Shaughnessy, winner a year ago at Syracuse, N. Y., with 249 of 250 and at St. Louis in 1936 with 248, were H. A. Montgomery, of Decatur, Ill.; C. H. Poulton, of San Antonio, Tex.; George Deyoe and W. W. Rapley, of Washington, D. C.; Alex Kerr, of Beverly Hills, Calif.; Bobby Parker, of Tulsa, Okla.; L. R. Ford, of Indianapolis, and Paul Slack and Jerry Decker, of Detroit.

Adds Another Crown

Shaughnessy, in addition to his bid for his third straight 12-gauge title, added the "champion of champions" crown to his list with his score of 100. That score won the shootoff for him against Bill Clark, of Chicago; A. Zuggales, of Indiana, Pa.; J. O. Ginter, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Dr. J. Nichols, of Cleveland. The five tied at 100 in yesterday's race between State and sectional champions but four others missed in the shootoff, staged as part of today's feature.

The amateurs did not have the "perfect score" field to themselves today, Al Ormsbee, of New Haven, Conn., and F. Misseldine, of Sea Island, Fla., breaking the "century" to pace the professionals, while Grant Ilseng, of Chicago; H. F. Ehle, of San Antonio, Tex., and defending champion G. H. Hubbard, of Indianapolis, checked in with 99 each.

Mrs. M. L. Smythe, of Aurora, Ohio, who teamed wih her husband to win the "family" crown from Shaughnessy and his brother, John, in a shootoff, led the feminine contingent with 99 of 100, a target ahead of defending queen Patricia Laursen, of Akron, and 21-year-old Jane Hoffman, of Lakeview, Ohio, a newcomer to the national scene. The Buckeye State definitely dominated the women's race, all three top-placers coming from here.

Many Guns in Running

Still very much in the race for the men's amateur laurels with scores of 99 of 100 were E. R. Davis, of Honolulu; C. A. Pickering, of Littlefield, Mass.; J. O. Ginter, of Jacksonville, Fla.; H. Adler, of San Antonio, Tex.; S. L. Hutcheson, of New York City; W. R. Ragsdale, of Boston; Ed Garland, of Belleville, N. J.; J. H. Nichols, of Cleveland; H. R. Hecker, of Detroit; Henry Joy, of Detroit; Ed Wylie, of New York City; R. Watson, of Laurel, Md.; Walter Dinger, of Chicago; Dr. E. Wray, of Rochester, N. Y.; W. A. Brown, of Detroit; R. R. Meli, G. R. Batten, Bill Clark and C. Winterowd, of Chicago, and Dave Arnette, L. S. Pratt and Junior Baldridge, of Indianapolis.

The field of 305 broke the record of 268 set a year ago at Syracuse. The marksmen will fire another 100 rounds tomorrow and wind up the shoot Sunday with a 50-target event.

Seixas, Patty Reach Junior Tennis Finals

Culver, Ind., Aug 8.—It will be East against West—Philadelphia against Los Angeles—in the junior division finals of the national junior and boys tennis tournamtnt tomorrow at Culver Military Academy.

Vic Seixas, the Philadelphian, came through today with a 6—2, 7—5, victory over hard-fighting Jimmy Evert, of Chicago, third ranking player in the tournament. Seixas, seeded second, now is the top-ranker, since the surprise defeat of No. 1 Gardner Larned, of Chicago, yesterday at the hands of Los Angeles' Budge Patty.

Pattly won again today, disposing of Bill Vogt, of Philadelphia without much difficulty, 6—3, 6—0, and insuring that the wind-up would not be an all-Philadelphia affair.

The boys' finals tomorrow will see Defending Champion Bob Falkenburg, of Hollywood, Calif., pitted against Jack Tuero, of New Orleans, seeded second. Falkenburg took his first set today against fourth-seeded Charles Tichenor, of Indianapolis, 6—4, faltered badly in the second to lose, 1—6, then rallied strongly to win the clinching set, 6—0.

Don Harris Loses

Tuero defeated third-seeded Don Harris, of Los Angeles, 6—2, 6—2.

Harris teamed with Falkenburg to win the boys' doubles championship. They defeated Tuero and Tichenor in a three-set match, 6—4, 4—6, 6—2.

Gardner Larned, of Chicago, and Robert Jake, of Milwaukee, second seeded, defeated the fourth-seeded team of Jack Ballack, of Long Beach, Calif., and Irving Parker, of Santa Barbara, Calif., in the semifinals of the junior doubles. The score was 6—3, 4—6, 6—4.

Hawaiian Takes Brother's Swim Title

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 8.—Brotherly love didn't count for a thing tonight, and Kiyoshi Nakama, of Hawaii, replaced his brother, Bunmei, as champion in the distance event of the National A. A. U. swim competition.

Kiyoshi romped through the 1,500 meters in 19 minutes 55.8 seconds and was pushed all the way by Jose Balmores, also of Hawaii, with Brother Bunmei a good third. Bunmei last year won the mile title, when the championships were decided on a yards basis rather than meters.

The sweep of the first three places gave Hawaii 10 of a possible 11 points and a big step toward the team's third straight title.

Charles Oda, fourth islander to qualify for the distance final, was up with the leaders when he suffered a stomach cramp at the 800-meter mark and was lifted from the water. Arnie C. Eckhlepp, University of Minnesota, was fourth.

Earl Clark, of Ohio State University, slipped through the water and air today for first place in the three-meter diving championship.

Clark, national collegiate diving champion, so dominated the field he won seven of the required dives and tied for the blue ribbon in the remaining three.

Sammy Lee, Korean student at Occidental College, whirled to fourth on his optional dives. Far down the list at the close of the required plunges, he climbed rapidly in the dives of his own choosing.

McNeill and Kovacs Reach Rye Net Semifinals

By the Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Tennis form finally found its way back into the Eastern Grass Court Tennis Championships today as Don McNeill and Frank Kovacs won semifinal berths in the men's singles and Pauline Betz and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke advanced to the women's singles finals.

McNeill, the National champion, and Kovacs, the Nation's third-ranking player, easily disposed of William Talbert, of Cincinnati, and Ted Schreder, of Glendale, Calif. Their semifinal opponents will be Wayne Sabin and Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, who advanced by the upset route over top-seeded Bobby Riggs and Frank Parker yesterday.

It looked bad for McNeil at one stage today, but after trailing at 1-3 in the first set, he gained control of his shots, won three games in a row and went on to win, 7—5, 6—3. After he had held his service four times only to lose out, Talbert offered little opposition in the second set.

Kovacs won five games in a row before Schroeder broke through in the first set, then overcame stubborn resistance to beat the young Californian, 6—2, 7—5. Schroeder fought doggedly for every point but could not match Kovacs' brilliant net play.

Miss Betz, the top-seeded woman star from Los Angeles, narrowly escaped being upset as she eliminated third-ranked Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Conica, Calif., 0—6, 6—3, 8—6.

Miss Bundy twice was within two points of winning the match but couldn't put them over against Miss Betz's stubborn resistance. Both played fine tennis in the last two sets with Miss Betz scoring several times by cross-court drives.

Mrs. Cooke, seeded second, earned a 6—2, 6—3 victory over Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles. Hitting deeply into the back court, Mrs. Cooke never left the outcome in doubt.

The women's doubles final, which will be played Sunday, will send Mrs. Cooke and Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, against Miss Bundy and Miss Betz. Only one of the men's doubles final brackets was filled, Riggs and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, overcoming Ed Amark, of San Francisco, and Robin Hippenstiel, of San Bernardino, Calif., in four sets.

Scarlet Flame Runs Second in Whiteman Purse; Roving Eye Finishes Third

By Walter Haight

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 8.—Coming from behind with a bold burst of speed, High Bud, owned and trained by John Bosley, jr., won the Paul Whiteman Purse, featuring the Friday program in this Allegany Mountain region. Perhaps the mountain water made the difference for High Bud had been unable to win in three recent starts. Today, under Jockey Willie Dufford's handling, the 4-year-old son of Bud Lerner was a hard-running horse. He moved around the leaders and came on to finish ahead of A. Gazle's Scarlet Flame. Third money in the group of about five furlongs went to O. E. Beaver's Roving Eye.

High Bud was one of several well-backed horses in the field and returned $8.20 for each $2 investment. Paul Whiteman, whose orchestra is playing at a Cumberland theater, presented a trophy to the winning owner.

The colors of John Bosley, jr., also came home in front in the day's steeplechase, a wide and woolly affair in which Flying Falcon was the winner. George Casalier's War Port, the public choice, was second and P. Worden's Rising Sun was third. Jockey Norman Brooks handled Flying Falcon, which paid $6.40 and set a new record for the about two miles at 3:30.

The biggest thrill of the day came in the first race. Carmada, owned by Danny Galotta, of Washington, D. C., and So Fast, the property of C. C. Heverly, finished in a dead heat. Jockey Bert Vesseli got Carmada to the front but the daughter of Caruso barely failed to resist the closing drive of So Fast. The dead heat, of course, caused a split in the payoff, both individually and in the daily double.

Carmada paid $4.90 to win and So Fast returned $10.60. After Danny Scocca rode Solo Dash to victory in the second race, those who had combinations with Carmada collected $13.50 and those with the So Fast tickets took down $70.

Peoples Drug Net Increases In Six Months

Net profit of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., and subsidiaries in the first six months totaled $441,381, equivalent to 90 cents a share on common stock. This compares with $382,287, equal to 78 cents a share in the same six months of 1940.

The pamphlet report issued last night showed that net sales in the first half this year aggregated $12,784,096 as compared with $11,184,763 last year in the same period. Deducting costs and operating expenses, net operating income totaled $707,352, against $491,500.

Estimated Federal income taxes nearly doubled in the period, jumping from $129,932 last year to $257,804 this year. The last figure is based on the estimated amounts payable under proposed revenue laws.

Earned surplus as of June 30 totaled $4,272,949, against $4,005,593 on the same date last year. Current assets were carried at $5,623,378 as of the latest date, against $5,037,260 last year while current liabilities were $1,784,574 against $1,455,117 in 1940.

Total assets advanced from $8,251,567 on June 30, 1940, to $9,059,332 this year.

Airlines Shatter Records

Two more airlines, which operate major terminals in Washington, yesterday reported record traffic in July.

American Airlines reported 113,624 revenue passenger during the month, an increase of 39.7 per cent over last year and a new all-time high. Revenue passenger miles flown were 39,299,312, an increase of 31.8 per cent over last year. Herbert D. Ford, district sales manager for American Airlines in Washington, said that local passenger revenue was up 87 per cent over July of 1940.

United Air Lines reported that July was the busiest month in the company's 15-year history with 30,086,000 revenue passenger miles flown for a gain of 21 per cent over last year. The Washington office of United advised yesterday its revenue for July exceeded that of the same month last year by nearly 100 per cent.

Richmond District Leads

The Federal Reserve Board estimates that department store sales between January 1 and August 2 averaged 16 per cent more than in the similar period last year.

Gains ranged from 11 per cent in the Minneapolis Federal Reserve district to 21 per cent in the Richmond district.

Other district increases were: Boston, 15; New York, 12; Philadelphia, 18; Cleveland, 18; Atlanta, 18; Chicago, 15; St. Louis, 19; Kansas City, 14; Dallas, 17, and San Francisco, 15 per cent.

Advertising Leaps 7.5 Per Cent

Retailers in 88 major cities placed 16,036,252 lines of display advertising in newspapers during the week ended July 26, an increase of more than 1,100,000 lines, or 7.6 per cent, over the 14,900,772 lines placed during the corresponding week of last year, according to Advertising Age.

This increase marked the nineteenth consecutive week in which reports of retail newspaper advertising have shown increases over last year, the publication reported.

Tax Prepayment Sales

The Treasury said yesterday cash receipts from the sale of tax prepayment notes in the first four days totaled $52,272,325.

Actual sales, officials added, may have been much larger, since most purchasers placed orders after the sales began on August 1 with local banks. The orders then had to go to the Federal Reserve Banks and the Treasury figure recorded only transactions completed by the Federal Reserve Banks and reported to the Treasury by mail.

The new notes, the first of their kind ever issued, are designed especially so that purchasers can turn back to the Treasury in payment of next year's income taxes, expected to be the highest in history.

The Outlook

By Hugh S. Magill, President of American Federation of Investors

Millions of Investors in Private Industry Declared Cold-Shouldered by Lawmakers

Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Investors, Inc., today acts as guest columnist for Merryle Stanley Rukeyser.

That private industry throughout our country is now devoting all of its vast resources to the promotion of national defense is an established fact. But a truth equally important is not so generally understood, namely, that back of all the great corporations carrying on this work for the Government are the investors, who are the real owners of these companies and whose investments in them make this work possible.

The importance of labor in all industry is well understood, but the public generally fails to realize the vitally important fact that it takes, on an average, about $7,000 furnished by investors, to provide buildings, equipment and tools necessary for every job held by a worker. The investment of the stockholder must come first, but dividends on his investment come last. Except as affected by other causes, as the wages of the laborers go up, the dividends of the investors go down.

o-o-o

An extensive survey, recently made by the American Federation of Investors of 165 typical corporations in the United States, reveals that these companies, having assets totaling nearly 45 billion dollars, are owned by 6,360,000 stockholders. In these same 165 corporations there are employed 3,490,000 workers.

As shown by this study, these great corporations are not owned by a few wealthy individuals, but by millions of stockholders, thrifty, tax-paying citizens of our country. It should be kept in mind that it is the investment of these more than six million substantial citizens that has made possible these 165 corporations which, in turn, provide jobs for more than three millions workers, and carry on these vast enterprises so essential to public welfare and national defense.

Another important fact brought out by this study is that these 165 corporations in 1940 paid total taxes amounting to $2,565,000,000. Taxes averaged $3.92 per common share of stock, whereas the dividends received by stockholders whose investments made these companies possible, amounted to an average of $1.91 per share. In other words, taxes took from these corporations twice as much per share as was received by the stockholders in dividends.

Notwithstanding the fact that there are approximately twice as many investors in private industry as there are laborers employed in these same industries, these millions of investors receive scant consideration by our lawmakers, whereas, the demands of the laborers receive fullest consideration. This is undoubtedly because laborers are now thoroughly organized, while the organization of investors has only just begun.

It is high time that investors recognize the importance of organized effort. As individuals their influence is small, but through organized cooperation they might be stronger than any other group and make their position understood. For example, in the enactment of revenue laws Congress seems to regard all corporations as owned by a few fabulously rich men, when, as a matter of fact, all taxes paid by corporations must ultimately come out of the pockets of the millions of stockholders or investors.

The dividends of stockholders in private industry are caught in the vicious circle of rising floor, which represents the increased cost of production due to increased wages, higher cost of raw material, and ever-increasing taxes, on the one hand, and the ceiling, which represents the selling price of the products. It seems strange that the Government should favor the raising of the floor and at the same time insist that the ceiling shall remain stationary, or even be lowered.

That excess profits have accrued to investors due to increased production is not supported by the facts. The taxes paid in 1940 by the 165 corporations referred to above increased 30 per cent, as compared with 1939, whereas, the net earnings of these companies increased only 17½ per cent in the same period. In view of all these facts it seems undeniably true that the investor in private industry is today the "forgotten man."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—The prolonged dry spell was a factor in renewed buying of corn futures here today that lifted prices ¾-1¼ cents in early trading back to the four-year high established yesterday, with May, 1942, deliveries up to 80¾.

WHEAT—However, drifted lower, losing as much as 1¾ cents at one time due to profit taking. Wheat lacked the substantial support that came from milling and flour trade interests earlier in the week.

Before the close, however, prices in both pits reversed earlier trends, but corn closed ¾-1¼ higher compared with yesterday's finish. September, 78⅝@78¾; December, 82@81⅞; May, 86⅞; while wheat was ½ off to ⅞ up, September, 1.12¼@1.12; December, 1.13⅝@1.15⅝. Forecast of scattered showers in important corn producing States, such as Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, took the edge off bullishness in that pit, while wheat rallied in response to short covering and strength of rye.

Rye closed ⅝-1⅛ higher than yesterday; oats, unchanged to ⅛ higher; soybeans, 1¼-2⅛, and lard unchanged.

Rain failed to materialize overnight in important sections of the central commercial corn producing area, although there was good moisture at some points in the West. Crop experts said that if good rains are not received soon further deterioration is likely, since the dry spell comes at a critical stage of development.

General Motors Sales Set New July Record

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 8.—General Motors Corporation reported today total sales of General Motors cars and trucks throughout the world during July of 224,517 units, compared with 110,659, in July, 1940, and 240,748 in June of this year.

It was the highest July total in the history of the company.

Total sales in the first seven months of 1941 were 1,666,548, compared with 1,209,446 in the like 1940 period.

Sales to dealers in the United States in July totaled 204,625 units compared with 99,664 in July, 1940, and 224,119 in June of this year. The seven-month total in this classification was 1,533,053 units compared with 1,112,698 in the like 1940 period.

Sales to consumers in the United States in July were 195,475 units compared with 145,064 in July of 1940 and 235,817 in June of this year. The seven-month total in this classification reached 1,578,597 compared with 1,086,885 in the like 1940 period.

Week's Output Shrinks

Detroit, Aug. 8 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that car and truck output this week, marked by changeover operations in most plants, would total 41,795. This compares with 62,146 last week and 11,635 at this time last year.

Ward's placed the output of all United States and Canadian automobile plants for the 1941 model year at 5,590,000 cars and trucks. The highest year in the industry's history was 1929 when United States and Canadian output reached 5,620,000 vehicles.

Banks Idle Cash Off 140 Million During Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said that lendable excess reserves of banks declined 140 million dollars to a total of $5,020,000,000 in the week ended August 6.

The decline was attributed to a number of technical factors, including Treasury sales of defense bonds and tax notes.

"During the week ended August 6 member bank reserve balances decreased 146 million dollars. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of 98 million dollars in money circulation, 15 million dollars in Treasury cash, and 116 million dollars in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of 14 million dollars in reserve bank credit, offset in part by a decrease of 82 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks, and increases of nine million dollars in gold stock and six million dollars in Treasury currency. Excess reserves of member banks on August 6 were estimated to be approximately $5,020,000,000, a decrease of 140 million dollars for the week."

Texas Oil Firms Rebuked; British Donation Ordered

Austin, Tex., Aug. 8 (AP).—A request by a group of Houston oil companies for additional hearings on a plan to donate Texas oil production August 17 to Great Britain brought a sharp rebuke today from a member of the State's oil regulatory agency.

Asserting there was no necessity for further hearings, Jerry Sadler, a member of the Texas railroad commission, said:

"To my notion, as long as certain companies have everything coming their way, the path is rosy. But once these companies are asked to donate something to the good of public welfare, then up goes a hue and cry that 'insurmountable difficulties' stand in the way.

"Britain does not need oil and defense materials next year—it needs and is begging for them now."

The commission set August 17 as the day on which operators voluntarily could run a day's crude production as a gift to Britain. The date ordinarily would be a shutdown day. If all producers contributed, the oil would aggregate more than 1,300,000 barrels with an estimated value of approximately five million dollars.

7-Month Steel Output Shatters All Records

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—July production of steel in the United States totaled 6,821,682 net tons, compared with 5,723,625 tons in July, 1940, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported today.

Production for the first seven months of 1941 was estimated at 47,730,225 tons, a record-breaking high figure, compared with 33,130,027 tons in the like period of 1940 and 24 per cent above the previous record of 38,522,433 tons in the first seven months of 1929.

The institute said that July totals slightly exceeded June despite a drop in calculated weekly production and rate of operations, reflecting the Fourth of July holiday and a shortage of scrap steel.

Plot Is Charged To 5 Directors Of Int. Utilities

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 8.—Charging a conspiracy by five of its directors to gain control of the company and vote themselves large salaries, International Utilities Corporation, a Maryland corporation with offices in New York, today instituted suit in State Supreme Court to enjoin an extraordinary meeting of stockholders.

The meeting is scheduled to be held in Baltimore August 19.

International Utilities is both a public utility holding concern and a general investment company. Its principal utility interests are the entire preferred and virtually all the common stock of Dominion Gas & Electric Co., and about 76 per cent of the common stock of General Water, Gas & Electric Co.

President Starts Fight

Justice Benjamin F. Schreiber today took under advisement a motion for a temporary injunction made by William B. Yeager, 31-year-old president of the company who recently assumed that post, succeeding P. M. Chandler.

The motion asked the court to restrain Paul C. Richardson, of New York, a director, from holding the Baltimore meeting. Richardson, like the other defendants, is an officer and member of an independent stockholders' committee of the corporation, and he has notified stockholders that the purpose of the session August 19 is to oust the present directorial board and elect new members.

Sanitation Commissioner William F. Carey was elected chairman of the corporation's board of directors last Wednesday.

The other defendants are E. Laurence White, of Boston, J. A. Hodgson, of Montreal, George H. Storm, of Greenwich, Conn., and William B. Major, of Berngenfield, N. J.

In its complaint, the corporation said White was the leading figure in an alleged conspiracy to gain control of the company, and that the defendants unsuccessfully attempted to get control at a stockholders' meeting last May 7.

Other Side of Battle

In opposing the motion to restrain him from holding the meeting, Richardson said that when the independent committee was organized last spring, he had been a director for about a year.

He supported that committee, he explained, because "it was apparent to me that the corporation affairs were not being managed in the interests of the stockholders, but were being managed for the primary purpose of enriching certain officers and directors of the corporation."

Richardson said that under the laws of Maryland the proposed meeting was legal. He said he called the meeting at the request of a majority of the stockholders.

Kress Sales Up 16%

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—S. H. Kress & Co. had sales of $7,561,812 in July against $6,514,079 in July, 1940, an increase of 16.4 per cent. Sales for the first seven months were $50,624,046, compared with $43,864,003 in the like 1940 period, or a gain of 15.4 per cent.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 30 to 45 cents a bale lower today after erratic movements that at one time put prices up as much as 90 cents a bale.

The Government crop estimate of 10,817,000 bales was about in line with expectations and left traders who had figured differently out on a limb.

Buying which followed the report was attributed to covering and replacement by traders who expected a higher figure. Except for that brief upturn the market was heavy, and the close was around the day's lows.

After a glance at the crop report, professional interest again was turned to Washington and the cotton-wheat loan stock freezing measure.

Most reports from Worth Street indicated mills were operating about at capacity, but were taking little new business. Sales appeared to be chiefly odd lot and fill-in orders.

Exports Thursday, 4,000 bales; season so far, 20,263; port receipts, 13,315; port stocks, 3,165,456.

Sugar Futures

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Commission House and Cuban buying overcame profit taking in the world sugar futures market today and prices finished 1½ to 4½ points higher in sales of 34,900 tons.

World contract sugar closed September *1.80; December, *1.85½; March, *1.89½; May, *1.91½; July, *1.93. (*Bid).

Domestic futures gained 1 to 7 points on a turnover of 13,900 tons, all deliveries except July, 1942, moving into new high ground.

Domestic contract:

	High	Low	Close
September	2.80	2.74	*2.80
January	2.84	2.79	*2.84
March	2.85	2.80	*2.84
May	2.87	2.83	*2.87

*Bid.

The last price for raws was 3.75 cents a pound, and traders believed next paid prices would be higher. Refined was advanced to 5.35 cents a pound by a few producers, while prices of 5.20 and 5.30 cents a pound were withdrawn by others.

Price Movements Narrow as General Market Fails to Advance for Tenth Consecutive Day

New York, Aug. 8.—Buying support wavered in today's stock market, and one average, it was the tenth successive session in which the list had been unable to progress.

Price variations were exceptionally narrow during the greater part of the proceedings but some selling cropped up in the final hour, particularly in oils, and lower trends were the rule at the close.

Speculative uneasiness revived, brokers said, when Treasury Secretary Morgenthau insisted before a Senate committee that the present tax bill be boosted substantially and bases broadened to add two million new taxpayers.

o-o-o

Oils apparently were depressed when, among other changes asked by the fiscal official, he suggested removal of allowances now made petroleum production companies for depletion of natural resources.

The Associated Press composite of 60 stocks ended with a loss of .2 of a point at 43.7. This barometer has not posted a plus sign since July 28. Of 741 issues traded, 396 were down, 150 up and 193 unchanged. Dealings sluggish most of the time picked up near the finish and transfers totaled 553,680 shares, compared with 497,120 Thursday.

Scattered stocks were responsive to optimistic business prospects, but others ignored relatively good items. General Motors was off a shade despite July sales were disclosed as the best for this month in the history of the company. Chrysler was off fractionally. A seasonal dip in this week's automotive output was undisturbing to the group.

o-o-o

Aside from the tax specter, bidders still were handicapped, brokers said, by conflicting war bulletins and fears of bearish developmetns in the Far East.

Among losers of 1 to around 2 points were Standard Oil (N. J.), Texas Corporation, Westinghouse, United States Gypsum, Lockheed, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft and Glenn Martin.

Lesser declines were shown for United States Steel, United States Rubber, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Atlantic Coast Line, Anaconda, Western Union, Montgomery Ward and Consolidated Edison.

Modest improvement was retained by United States Industrial Alcohol, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Pan American Airways, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical and Eastman Kodak.

Among moderate gainers in the Curb were Brewster Aero, American Light & Traction and Humble Oil. On the off side were American Gas, Gulf Oil and Pantepec. Volume here approximated 126,000 shares versus 132,000 yesterday.

o-o-o

Low-priced rails took most of the play in today's bond market, rising fractions to a point or more, while other groups moved indecisively in quiet trading.

Volume expanded to $8,050,300, par value, the best in more than a week, and compared with $7,075,000 on Thursday. The five major groups in the Associated Press averages showed only minor changes either way.

British Empire bonds put on another demonstration of strength, reflecting, apparently, a better feeling in some circles over war developments. New South Wales 5s ran up 4⅝ points to 75, Sydney 5½s were up 2 at 70, and Australia 5s were up ¾ at 72. Queensland 7s and Canada 5s also were higher. Other dollar issues showed little change.

United States Governments gave up small fractions on both the Stock Exchange and over the counter. Trading was light.

Decon Pilots Armage to Cup Race Victory

By the Associated Press

Oxford, Md., Aug. 8.—Making the most of a mild breeze, A. M. Decon, Larchmont, N. Y., piloted his "Armage to victory today in the first race of the Lipton Cup series for star boats.

Armage led 14 other sailboats across the finish line in the Chesapeake Bay and Tred Avon Yacht Clubs' joint annual regatta on Tred Avon River.

The coveted Lipton trophy was presented to the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club in 1927 by the Late Sir Thomas Lipton.

Clark Daniel, Washington, D. C., annexed the first race for comets in the Panola trophy series, bringing his Robert E. Lee in ahead of the pack.

Meanwhile, a host of Chesapeake Bay Yacht Club boats were en route here in a race from Gibson Island. The Poker Bowl trophy will be awarded for the best corrected time in the cruising division.

More than 150 sailboats and about 75 pleasure craft were on hand for the opening of the three-day regatta. Many of the boats here came from Norfolk, Newport News and other Virginia points.

Arlington Pin Girls Triumph

The Arlington Bowling Center Acettes, rolling as a team for the first time, came through in championship style at their home alleys last night and defeated the Anacostia Spillway girls, 1,559 to 1,526. Fifty pins behind at the beginning of the third game, the Acettes, with Mildred Peacock contributing high single for the night of 139, made up their handicap and added 39 more pins to emerge victorious. Kitty Rice led the Acettes with her 319 set, Mary Pike had 318, Miss Peacock 314 and Thelma Simmers 300. Caroline Hiser's 120-350 topped the losers with Mary Magnotto next with 315.

CAVALIERS WIN

Hap Newman's Del Ray Cavaliers had their initial workout last night as a prospective District League quintet and came through to win over a strong Navy Yard quintet, 1,628 to 1,552. Andy Gleeson led the Cavaliers with a 134 single and 351 set, although Newman himself led for high set with 352. Jimmy Cenci was near high with a 133 game. Tom Schmid's 121-332 topped the losers.

Fat Boy Defeats Wine Ten, 6 to 3

With Harold Steffes pitching one-hit ball, Fat Boy last night turned back Plaza Wine and Liquor, 6-3, to take first-half honors in the Sherwood League. Steffes' own wildness and a damaging error permitted the Plazamen to score their three runs. Roger Sawtell, Plaza hurler, collected the only hit off Steffes, driving in two runs to give his team a 2-1 lead in the fourth.

United States Aggies remained in the National Night League running by handing the crack Greenbelt club its first defeat in league competition, 6-4. Ed Todryck held the Greenies to four scattered hits.

Nats Lose, 15-8, In Hitting Duel With Bosox

Anderson hit Pete Fox in the back to open the second inning and then walked Cronin. Fox took third after Williams flied deep to Roger Cramer and when Case threw to the plate after catching Tabor's short fly, Cronin scooted to second. Foxx fetched them home with a mighty double off the center-field wall and the Red Sox owned an 8-2 lead.

The Red Sox increased the lead to 9-2 on Cronin's eighth homer of the season over the left-field fence in the fourth inning.

Nats Score in Fifth

The Nats picked up a run in the fifth when Case singled to center, took second on a Foxx error, moved to third when Cramer grounded out and scored as Doerr tossed out Buddy Lewis. In the seventh Washington shaved Boston's lead to 9-8, with Jimmy Bloodworth leading off with a home run over the left-field fence. Singles by Anderson, Cramer and Lewis produced two more runs and removed Wagner from the mound.

Boston seemed insulted by that mild uprising and staged a more murderous one in its half of the seventh. Singles by Ryba, Williams and Tabor, doubles by Doerr and Pytlak and a triple by Fox, coupled with errors by Early, Bloodworth and Lewis, fashioned six Red Sox runs. The details are too revolting to report.

No faint-hearted specimens are the Nats, however, for in the ninth they manufactured three runs. Morris Aderholt batted for Anderson and walked and Case beat out a bunt down the third-base line for his fourth hit. Aderholt took third as Cramer forced Case and scored as Lewis was thrown out by Ryba.

Cramer, who had taken second on Lewis' tap, scored on Travis' single to center and Travis scored on Mickey Vernon's double to the same sector. Archie ended the engagement by tapping meekly in front of the plate to be thrown out by Catcher Pytlak.

Air Nine Beats FBI, 6-1, in Gov't Play-Off

Scoring a 6-to-1 triumph over F. B. I. in the first game of a playoff for second-half honors in the U. S. Government Baseball League, Naval Air Station nine yesterday found itself only one game away from the circuit championship. The first-half title already belongs to the Airmen. They will face F. B. I. Monday in the crucial game.

"Horse" Meyers tossed seven-hit ball for the Air Station, which reached F. B. I.'s Bright for ten safeties in the eight-inning game. A triple by the Airmen's Korab with two mates on base in the sixth inning featured play.

Baltimore Ten Scores, 10-3, In M. A. Meet

Unleashing unexpected power that netted seven runs in the third inning, Overnight Transportation, of Baltimore, routed unpredictable International Business Machines, 10-3, to win the Mid-Atlantic softball championship last night in Ballston Stadium.

Tied at 3-all in the last of the third, Overnight batted around before the side was retired. A home-run by Larry Karpook, who won his third straight game in the tournament and a pair of line-drive doubles by Billy Hoban featured the uprising. Karpook gave up five hits and fanned ten to run his tournament strikeout total to 42. Pete Mastrodonato was hit hard, but three errors in the third inning led to his downfall.

In an exhibition game Yellow Cab upset Senate Beer and Abe Rosenfeld, 1-0, in an eight-nning game. Bump Simonds turned in a masterful performance in holding the Beermen to two singles and walking none. Simonds scored the winning run when Phil Fox dropped Al Welen's throw with two out in the eighth inning.

Some more of the dramatic brilliance of Norman Corwin is to be allied over WJSV Sunday night at 9:30 with the most magnificent literature ever produced.

For Corwin in his "26 by Corwin" series on the "Columbia Workshop" is to present his original dramatizations of the famous Old Testament stories of Samson and Delilah, of Esther, and of Job, all in that half-hour broadcast.

An idea of the variety can be gleaned from the fact that "Samson" is to be presented as a verse-drama; "Esther," in operatic form, and "Job" will be done as a recitative.

Deems Taylor, Columbia's music contultant, who's the commentator for the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra broadcasts in addition to being a well known composer, has written the musical score for "Job." Bernard Herrmann, Columbia conductor, has written special music for "Samson," and Lyn Murray, CBS choir director, has done the musical accompaniments for "Esther."

Says Corwin: "The writings of the Bible, ranked with the greatest literature ever written, often chronicle that an event took place, but give no record of what went on in the minds of the prinicapl characters at the time."

"I feel that a writer, giving wide scope to the imagination, can fill that in and produce absorbing drama."

"26 by Corwin" means 26 plays by Corwin over CBS in as many weeks.

Girl Gives Life's Savings for Defense Bonds

With a bag full of pennies and a heart of gold, 9-year-old Larry Louise Stowe went down to Treasury House yesterday and purchased two $50 National Defense Bonds. She handed 7,500 pennies—her life's savings—across the counter.

Larry is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Gray, of Hillside, Md. She is a fourth-grade student in the school there.

Earla Marshall, Treasury House hostess, accepted

America's Newest Sea Weapon . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

Self-Powered Landing Boats

On Lake Ponchartrain, at New Orleans, the United States Navy yesterday tested its newest weapon—sturdy, self-powered landing boats, capable of carrying 20 to 30 men each.

The broad-nosed craft (see cut at top) are constructed to run aground under a smoke screen laid by torpedo boats and land troops "without getting their feet wet." A fleet of the speedy boats are ready for Navy use. The formation in which they operate, similar to the old football "flying wedge," is shown above.

If tanks are required by the landing force, they may be carried on steel beams mounted across two of the boats. The craft below carry a tractor, illustrating how a tank would be transported.

Department Store Sales Up 20 Per Cent . .

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Federal Reserve figures show that department store sales in Washington for the first half of 1941 are 20 per cent above last year. Receipts in June were 15 per cent over the same month in 1940.

Store managements are alternating between joy and despair, what with rising revenues on the one hand and shortages of competent sales and mechanical help on the other.

Government jobs and defense industries, not to mention Selective Service, are claiming a goodly number of mercantile employes, though you won't hear any grumbling from store bosses on that account. As one of them said:

"Business is terrific and we do have a personnel problem, there's no getting around it. But we'll get along."

In May, the latest month for which figures are available, nearly twice as many washing machines were sold here as last year, 1,493 compared with 799 in May, 1940. Sales of electric refrigerators are up 50 per cent, electric ranges 100 per cent.

Furniture buying is up 40 per cent. New automobiles titled in June numbered 4,063, compared with 3,241 a year ago. For the first six months of 1941, the figure was 22,128; last year, 16,606.

Several business houses are finding it necessary to build additions or establish new branches to accommodate their trade. News of the Capital's boom is no secret elsewhere and inquiries are being received here daily, particularly by the Board of Trade and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, from firms and individuals seeking information preparatory to setting up shop in this fertile market.

This is traditionally the dead season, the doldrums dreaded by retailers. Well, the department store sales index for June was 167.7, compared with 145.8 last year and 122 in 1935, and while it will hardly be as high this month—July is the dullest period on the calendar—it is almost a certainty that the figure will be the highest for the month on record.

Check transactions are another barometer of mounting business. Their aggregate, for last month, was $142,574,129, highest on record, and more than $24,000,000 above the June, 1940, figure. For the first six months of this year: $830,296,718, a gain of $137,000,000 over the same period in 1940.

There are comparable gains all along the line—postal receipts, bank deposits and, of course, real estate sales and constructions, which will be considered in the next article.

Not the least affected by the boom, which has yet to reach its peak, are the restaurants. In the last six months more than 100 new eating places have been opened, twice as many as normal.

Here, too, the increasing volume of business, combined with losses of personnel to the armed services and the civil branch of Government, has created a shortage of help. Preventing it from becoming acute is the well-oiled training program sponsored by the Washington Restaurant Association, which placed 1,000 in jobs last month, compared with 300 in June of last year.

The association won't deny that waiting for seats is the rule during the downtown lunch hour but is of the opinion that restaurant facilities are adequate for prompt service at other hours of the day, at least as far as its membership is concerned. The association represents approximately 65 per cent of Washington's 35-million-dollar-a-year restaurant business.

Tomorrow: Housing and real estate.
